A circuit court jury may begin its deliberations today in the case against Police Lt. F. Lyman Davis, charged with taking a bribe from a brothel operator, following testimony by the suspended police officer.

Seven more policemen took the stand in Judge James F. Nangle's court today to testify in defense of Davis. Like others who testified yesterday, they had served with the defendant in the Page boulevard police district.

They told the jury Davis had an excellent reputation among his fellow officers, that he had little chance to give "protection" to a brothel operator, as the state alleges, and that he never instructed subordinates to "turn a deaf ear" to complaints of vice operations in his district.

$500 Payment Charged.

Mrs. Ethel Clift, the state's key witness, said she paid a total of $500 to Davis to permit her to operate a bawdy house in the Page boulevard district.

Detective Alfred Tucci said Lt. Davis ordered a surveillance on Mrs. Clift's establishment after the police morality squad made a raid in 1955.

"Two or three times a week Davis would call us and we'd pick him up, ride around the district and always look at the place," Tucci said.

Asked as to his opinion of Davis, the witness said: "I consider him a top officer—very efficient with a weapon, a wonderful dresser."

Told to Break Place Up.

Sgt. John M. O'Connell testified he was instructed by Davis after the morality squad's raid to "break that place up—don't let it go on."

The witness said he and other officers raided the establishment about two months later after the district had received complaints "indicating it was running pretty wide open."

Persons in the neighborhood said men were entering and leaving from 11 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock the following morning, Sgt. O'Connell testified. He said the address of the establishment was 925A Goodfellow boulevard but it also had the number of 5853A Suburban tracks at another entrance.

Three young women were arrested in the raid led by Sgt. O'Connell, but Mrs. Clift was not found in the house, he said.

Other policemen who appeared as defense witnesses today were: Cpl. Joseph Soehnlen, Cpl. Frank J. Nace, Cpl. Joseph E. Williams, Patrolman Pierce Conley, Detective John Haney and Patrolman Albert Schroeder.

Instructions given by Davis to subordinates in his district were always to suppress vice of all kinds, police officers testified yesterday.

Cpl. John Beckmann told the jury: "Davis had an obsession against prostitution in any form. That extended to B-girls, too."

Describing the difficulties a police officer would encounter in giving "protection" of this sort, Police Lt. Frank Matekar said about 30 policemen would have to be involved in the scheme, from the district captain down to the beat patrolman.

Defense Attorney Morris A. Shenker asked if such an arrangement could have existed in the Page district in early 1955.

"Anything is possible, but it would have been very difficult—and foolish," Matekar replied. "I don't believe Lt. Davis is a fool."

STEVENSON GETS WARM WELCOME
AT SPRINGFIELDDisregards Prepared
Address, Speaks Informally at 'Homecoming.'By ROY J. HARRIS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 8.—Adlai E. Stevenson, former Governor of Illinois and now the Democratic candidate for President, was given an enthusiastic "welcome home" today by a crowd of several thousand persons at historic Courthouse Square here.

Smiling and clearly pleased by the reception, Stevenson disregarded the text of a speech he had prepared for the occasion and gave instead an informal 15-minute talk from a few notes he had written as he sat on a hunting-draped platform waiting to be introduced.

The crowd spread over the south lawn of the courthouse and across the street, and was waiting when Stevenson and his official party arrived by motorcade from the airport, where they landed in a chartered plane from Chicago shortly before noon.

Introduced by Mayor.

The Democratic Presidential candidate was introduced by Mayor Nelson Howarth, a Republican.

"The Mayor told me," Stevenson said, "that my name would be on the tips of people's tongues today. I would prefer, however, that my name be on the tips of their pencils on election day."

Stevenson said he also had been told, by several old friends as he came to the platform, that he was looking well. "If I am, it is from standing in front of people and making speeches—not from playing golf."

That was greeted with laughter and applause, and Stevenson added: "I must assure you that that was a non-political remark."

Stevenson recalled his years as Governor, from 1949 to 1953, and said they were "the happiest years of my life." He said he felt that "we accomplished much for the State of Illinois that we love so well."

Definition of the Issues.

In his prepared text, handed to reporters at Chicago, Stevenson had said the political issues this year are not "peace and prosperity" but rather "how we go about getting them."

The issues, he said, are "how we make this a prosperity not just for some of us, but for all of us, how we go about using this prosperity for the things we need most—like schools—and how we achieve a lasting peace in all the world—farther than that is really peace at all."

Others assigned places on the platform included the new Democratic candidate for Governor, Richard B. Austin of Chicago, who was making his first downstate appearance since he was chosen by the state committee to replace Herbert C. Paschen last Tuesday.

Stevenson referred to the occasion as "a homecoming."

TRUMAN SAYS
EISENHOWER
PASSES BUCK
TO ASSISTANTS

Assails Administration's 'Selling Campaign' After Geneva Parley as Threat to World Peace.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Harry S. Truman flew back to Missouri today following a speech last night in which he set the tone for his own personal campaign against the Eisenhower Administration in the coming campaign, whether it becomes the official course taken by the Democratic party or not.

The former President slashed at both the foreign and domestic policies of the Administration and charged the President with passing the buck on important issues in order to hang on to his personal popularity, thus endangering the national welfare.

Truman, in rare form reminiscent of his famed whistle stop campaigns, addressed a dinner meeting sponsored by the American Political Science Association which is holding its fifty-second annual convention here.

Hardly "Non-Political."

Truman's appearance had been billed for weeks as "non-political" but any such notion was dispelled at the outset of his talk when he announced that "an anxious political scientist" you can take sides if you feel like it—and I usually feel like it. Most of his audience were members of the teaching profession.

More than 500 diners paid $6 a plate to hear the former President. Those who could not be accommodated at dinner jammed the balconies above the grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

His listeners, either openly partisan or too entertained to restrain themselves, interrupted him repeatedly with laughter and applause as he combined sarcasm, wisecracks, straight facts and notes of gravity in making his case against the Eisenhower Administration's record.

His principal points were that in his job the President had combined slick advertising programs with the old Army game, which he described as passing the buck.

The Geneva conference at the summit he said brought the "selling campaign" to its peak and he felt back on a magazine article to back up his claim that Russia had gained most from the eased tensions attributed to that historic meeting.

Two New Dimensions.

Two new dimensions have been added to the White House—Madison Avenue has been brought to Washington or Washington has been taken to Madison Avenue and there is a new concept that the President shall not be held responsible for anything occurring in his Administration unless it turns out successfully, he contended.

His whimsy and humor vanished when he reached the part of his speech dealing with foreign affairs. It was in this area, he said, that what he termed the "selling campaign" on the President's meeting last summer with Russian leaders could have its "most dreadful consequences."

"Peace," he said, "must be built on a firm foundation. He who undermines and destroys the foundation for the sake of temporarily preventing outbreaks on the surface does us no service whatever."

"I fear that there is an ominous parallel between what is transpiring now and the events of the 1920s, when the world drifted and allowed the forces to grow and the pressures to be built up which eventually resulted in World War II."

"We are not going to prevent a third world war by looking for the easy and expedient way of every difficult situation. We are not going to prevent a third world war by putting personal responsibility above statesmanship. We are not going to prevent a third world war by the kind of selling campaign you use to sell soap."

Letting of Own Propaganda.

He suggested that perhaps the Administration has been the victim of its own propaganda in the 1952 campaign. This might account, he continued, for what he termed the "abortive unleashing" of Chiang Kai-shek, Nationalist Chinese leader, announced in the President's State of the Union message in 1953, "only to be followed by releasing him in 1954."

"It might also account for the proposal in the same State of the Union message to 'repudiate' the Yalta agreements which in due course was followed by submitting to Congress a resolution reaffirming the free election pledges made at Yalta," he continued.

"It might account for the loose talk about 'liberation' of the satellite peoples which was followed by the acceptance at Geneva of the status quo in Eastern Europe. But no matter how you account for them, these reckless statements and subsequent reversals have made us look foolish and

FBI AGENTS SENT TO RIOT SCENE IN KENTUCKY; MORE
TROOPS CALLEDPossible Civil Rights
Violations Studied—Showdown Expected
as Schools Resume
Monday.

STURGIS, Ky., Sept. 8 (AP)—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents arrived last night and recall orders went out to hundreds more Kentucky National Guardsmen in the wake of threatening pro-segregation mobs in two western Kentucky communities.

A state officer said a showdown would come when schools reopen Monday in Sturgis and nearby Clay.

Nine Negro students have said they will try to return Monday to previously all-white Sturgis High School. At Clay, 15 townspeople told a newspaper man they would continue to resist integration in their schools.

A Clay mob yesterday drove newspaper men from the city for a time. Two grade school Negro students who had appeared at the school Thursday did not show up yesterday, when the mob formed.

Other Developments.

As the two tense communities—only 11 miles apart—remained relatively quiet, with school closed there were these developments:

1. The National Guard said 500 guardsmen would be assembled at nearby Camp Breckinridge on a standby basis in event of trouble Monday.

2. Don Sturgis, acting commissioner of public safety, said FBI agents had arrived in Sturgis to investigate the possibility of violation of civil rights.

3. Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler said he would declare martial law on a moment's notice any time the adjutant general of the National Guard requested it.

4. A Sturgis spokesman for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said the organization would meet Monday or Tuesday in Sturgis "if there was any trouble."

Sturgis and its surrounding area has an estimated population of 5000 with 1000 of the total Negroes. About 600 Negroes live inside the city limits.

Clay has no Negro residents inside the city but 37 Negro families live in the area. Clay's official population in 1950 census was 1274.

Football Game Played.

Sturgis high school opened its home football season last night by beating Bowling Green, 25 to 0. About 2500 watched the contest but newspaper men at the game said they saw no Negroes among the spectators.

Newspaper men toured the Negro section of the town at 10 p.m. and said it was "deadly quiet." Only one house displayed a light.

National guardsmen patrolled the school grounds. Sentries were posted at each entrance.

Anti-integration demonstrations reached a peak Thursday in Sturgis when guardsmen with fixed bayonets escorted nine Negro students through a jeering mob into the school. The Negro students did not appear yesterday for fear of violence, and in some cases said their fathers' coal mine jobs were threatened if they attended school yesterday.

The trouble at Clay erupted yesterday and Sturgis said state police officers would be sent to the community Monday.

Woman Editor Threatened.

Mrs. Frances Armstrong, editor of the Henderson (Ky.) Gleaner & Journal, a morning daily newspaper, went into Clay planning to take pictures of the crowd at the school. She said a burly man told her: "Lady, you ain't going to take any pictures. We got women in this crowd who'll take it away from you and smash it."

As far as that little squirt with your (referring to a newsman with her) we'll beat him up."

John Robinson, a retired 70-year-old Negro school teacher who operates a grocery store at Sturgis, told reporters he had been in touch with the N.A.A.C.P. He said the organization was "waiting to see what the wind blows" but if there is trouble Monday a meeting will be held that night or the next day.

A committee representing the crowd which for a time blocked the street to the Clay school met with a newspaper man by arrangement late yesterday.

The reporter, Jack Hudgins of Evansville, Ind., said the men who refused to identify themselves were "very bitter toward Chandler" for calling out the guard in Sturgis and expressed fear that Clay would undergo the same experience.

He said the group members were firm in repeating they would oppose integration in their city.

The adjutant general of the Kentucky National Guard, Maj. Gen. J. B. Williams, and Sturgis

PLASTIC BALLOON
SOARS TO RECORD
OF 26.8 MILES

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 8 (AP)—University of Minnesota scientists claimed a balloon record yesterday, by nearly 20,000 feet. A plastic bag they sent up soared 142,900 feet, or about 26.8 miles.

The record was set by a pyramid-shaped balloon 180 feet long. It was constructed of mylar, a new plastic, and its skin, one-thousandth of an inch thick, held a million cubic feet of helium.

Edward P. Ney and John R. Winckler, university physicists working under the Office of Naval Research, said the balloon carried 48 pounds of instruments, cameras, ballast and timers.

Previous altitude mark for unmanned balloons, 125,000 feet, was set last year by a bag sent aloft by Winzen Research, Inc., of Bloomington, Minn., in a separate military project.

Ney said the experiments are being carried out to study cosmic rays and meteorology in the upper atmosphere. Earlier balloons in the project have reached upwards of 100,000 feet, he said.

6-FOOT 7-INCH SKELETON
OF INDIAN FOUND IN CAVE

SULLIVAN, Mo., Sept. 8 (AP)—Roy Jurgens, 24-year-old amateur archeologist, has found what he believes to be an ancient skeleton of an Osage Indian.

Jurgens said he found the skeleton on a Labor Day expedition to a cave on the Meramec river near his home here. He had found pottery, tools and jewelry in other trips to the cave.

Jurgens, a substitute letter carrier, said he was digging in the cave when he spotted the kneecap of the skeleton. He uncovered the entire skeleton, buried in a sitting position.

He said the skeleton measured 6 feet, 7 inches. Jurgens said he plans to call in professional archeologists to study the find.

ARMY TRAINEE IS KILLED
WHEN GRENADE EXPLODES

FORT KNOX, Ky., Sept. 8 (AP)—One trainee was fatally injured and two hurt when a "dud" rifle grenade exploded after it was tossed into a waste basket on a firing range here yesterday.

Pvt. Billy Walters, 17 years old, Emma, Ky., died four hours later of fragment wounds. Army authorities said Walters picked up the grenade on the range where his infantry unit had fired earlier in the day.

Pvt. Norman Hayden, 18, Prestonsburg, Ky., was reported in satisfactory condition with multiple fragment wounds. Pvt. Wilford L. Fuller, 18, Rockingham, N.C., also injured in the blast, was treated and returned to his unit. The trainees were "polishing up" the area when the explosion occurred.

C.A.B. AID MUST EXPLAIN REPORT THAT HE BOUGHT STOCK OF AIRLINE

Board Gives Attorney Albert Ruppert Five Days to Reply on Apparent Violation of Rules.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board said yesterday it has given Albert H. Ruppert, one of its trial attorneys, five days in which to explain an apparent violation of its rules regarding acquisition of airline securities.

Although the CAB did not say so, it was reported that Ruppert apparently had invested in stock of Northeast Airlines. The CAB had asked the Securities Exchange Commission to investigate a suspected leak of a CAB route award which led to a sudden rise in the value of Northeast stock.

Ruppert, before becoming a trial attorney in the Bureau of Air Operations, was a CAB safety examiner.

It was Ruppert's finding two years ago that Arthur Godfrey had willfully violated air regulations, by buying the Teterboro, N. J., airport tower, that resulted in a six-month suspension of the radio-television entertainer's operating license.

CAB Announcement. The CAB limited its announcement of the action to one paragraph, saying:

"In response to inquiries as to action in regard to the employment of Albert H. Ruppert, the board states it has notified him by letter of facts and circumstances upon which it appears that he has violated the rules of the board with reference to acquisition of airline securities, and that he has been warned by the rules, following which final action will be taken. No further comment will be proper at this time."

Ruppert has been away from his job for the last week. His office said he was expected back next Monday.

Informal persons said the CAB is still vitally concerned as to who caused the "leak" regarding Northeast.

CAB Chairman James R. Dugan asked the SEC to investigate the behavior of the market after the leak. He also reported to have asked the FBI to look into the matter.

Voted in Secret. The CAB voted in secret Aug. 2 to extend the CAB's investigation of the "leak" to include the names of the airlines which operate in New England, south of Washington to Miami, in preference to the Miami-New York proposals of various other lines.

Northeast stock jumped $2 to the following morning, and has remained about $4 above its former level since that time.

On Aug. 10 the CAB took the unprecedented action of announcing its decision, to extend Northeast's route, in a news release before its formal order in the case had been issued.

Normally the CAB withholds all information and news releases on such decisions until the orders putting them into effect have been issued.

A Chicago Daily News dispatch said the names of three roads to Senator Steve Bridges (Rep., New Hampshire), are on a list of persons who had a stock market windfall of perhaps $75,000.

CAB Chairman Dugan, who received the Securities and Exchange Commission, refused to make it public.

Bought Day After Decision. These persons bought Northeast Airlines stock the day after the CAB voted secretly to give Northeast the route to Miami, the Daily News said.

The CAB meeting at which the secret decision was made broke up at 11 p.m. Aug. 2.

On that day, and for several days before that, only between 500 to 400 shares of Northeast stock were traded. But on Aug. 3, a record 24,000 shares were traded and the price climbed from the $9.12 1/2 a share, the previous day's price, to close at $12.50. Yesterday it closed at $12.75.

The CAB decision was as announced until Aug. 10. (Also on the list of Aug. 3 stock purchasers, the Daily News said, is Robert Snodgrass, president of the Atlas Finance Blast of undetermined origin shattered the structure soon after 400 pupils had gone home. A teacher, Miss Emma Blackburn, was the only person in the building. She suffered rib and wrist fractures. The $190,000 building had been in use only four days.

140 M.P.H. Typhoon Leaves Heavy Damage Across Okinawa

U.S. Army Base Hit Hard—Man Electrocuted—36 Vicious Sentry Dogs Escape—Storm Heads for Japan.

FORT BUCKNER, Okinawa, Sept. 8 (AP)—A typhoon, with winds of 140 miles per hour, cut a swath of damage across Okinawa today and blew toward Japan, Korea and Red China.

Extensive damage was caused to United States Army headquarters here.

The first, meager details announced by the Army said there had been "one death by electrocution."

The 400-mile wide storm "caused extensive damage to the Ryukyu command headquarters" of the United States Army here, smashed wind velocity measuring devices and turned over numerous cars, the announcement said.

All personnel were warned to remain inside headquarters because "36 vicious sentry dogs" escaped at the height of the storm.

The typhoon was called "the worst typhoon in the last seven years" to hit the island.

It already had been blamed for a freak ocean current which drowned 11 United States Marines on a north Okinawa beach Wednesday.

Reports from United States weather planes indicated that 55 m.p.h. winds for 200 miles in each direction would pound the island another day.

Patients Moved. All Americans except those on emergency duty were ordered to stay indoors. Hospital patients were moved to typhoon-proof buildings and many American planes evacuated from Okinawa.

The Air Force spotted the typhoon center 50 miles northeast of Okinawa at 3 a.m. and said that six hours later it was 50 miles west of the opposite side of Okinawa.

The force predicted it would center 230 miles west of central Kyushu, Japan, at mid-afternoon Monday, a course

Co. of Atlanta and Republican national committeeman from Georgia.

(Snodgrass said he made a net profit of $2043 on the 1000 shares of Northeast stock which he bought for $10 a share on the morning of Aug. 3. He said he sold the stock on Aug. 16 for $12.25 a share. Snodgrass denied that he acted on inside information, although he said he knew that the CAB met on Aug. 2 to discuss the Northeast case.)

Friends of Ruppert said he was planning to quit the CAB "anyway."

WIFE DIVORCES RUBINOFF, CALLS HIM 'HIGH STRUNG'

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 8 (AP)—Violinist David Rubinoff was "very high strung" complained his wife, Martice, 42 years old, in divorce court.

She was granted a divorce yesterday but said she will continue to serve as business manager and board agent for the 58-year-old concert violinist.

Mrs. Rubinoff told the judge her husband was such a perfectionist it was impossible to please him. She received title to their $150,000 home and $150 a month for support of their son, Rubin, 12.

Pravda Tells of Russian's Fight With Red Tape to Grow Flowers

By B. J. CUTLER
The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special To.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8.—Pravda, the Russian Communist party newspaper, told a story with a happy ending yesterday—about a man who planted flowers outside his house and was accused of undermining Communist principles of land ownership.

Unlike many people who were denounced for anti-state actions and recanted their crimes, the flower-lover stuck to his principles.

The hero of the story was Boris Ivanovich Romanenko, an engineer who lives in a factory house in Khimki, a suburb of Moscow. His success in growing gladioli and asters led his neighbors to fill in a swamp in front of the house and learn from him how to raise pansies, daisies and roses.

The next spring more housewives wanted to grow flowers. In the Communist tradition, they were told to draw up a plan and submit it to the housing and communal services department. There it came to the attention of Postnikov, the assistant factory manager.

Postnikov exploded, "You are introducing private ownership of land, something that has been abolished."

As Romanenko and his friends retreated in confusion, a bureaucrat named Pashko thought of a good Communist solution. He told them to organize a collective farm to grow flowers—with an elected chairman, work teams, brigade leaders and job quotas.

But the Khimki bureaucrats counter-attacked. Makeyev, head of the communal service commission, demanded that Romanenko be put on trial for filling in the swamp without permission.

Romanenko took his plight to the Academy of Pedagogical Sciences and made speeches at Young Communist League meetings. Suddenly everyone decided that planting flowers in factory neighborhoods was a good thing and not reactionary private use of land.

At the factory in Khimki the bosses stopped denouncing Romanenko and began making speeches urging everybody to dig. Pravda suggested that the bosses talk less and grab a spade themselves.

PRIME MINISTER OF PAKISTAN QUILTS OVER PARTY TIES

KARACHI, Sept. 8 (AP)—Prime Minister Chaudhri Mohammed Ali, head of Pakistan's government since Aug. 11, 1955, resigned today. His resignation was accepted by President Iskandar Mirza.

The Prime Minister has been beset by political difficulties. Two ministers of his Cabinet, Malikur Rehman Kayani and Sardar Amir Azam Khan, resigned from the Moslem League last Thursday and joined the Republican party, reducing Ali's Moslem League party to 11 members in a house of 80.

The retiring Prime Minister, who is said to have joined the Moslem League only because he considered it to be a party to be elected to Parliament, accepted leadership of a Republican-United front coalition on Aug. 27 while attempting to continue as leader and member of the Moslem League. The move was against the advice of some Moslem League members.

All said today he had given up his membership in the league.

Chaudhri Mohammed Ali had been Finance Minister in the Pakistan government until he succeeded a Prime Minister of a similar name, Mohammed Ali, in 1955.

MOLLET LEAVES ALGERIA AFTER 24-HOUR PARLEY

ALGERS, Sept. 8 (AP)—France's Premier Mollet left Paris by plane today after 24 hours of hurried talks on the Algerian insurrection.

The Premier, who arrived yesterday, rode to the Algiers airport along roads lined with troops, but there was no serious incident in Algiers in his stay.

Food supplies were air-dropped in the area shortly after first word of the emergency was heard in Taipei from a radio transmitter broadcasting from the mountain site. No casualties were reported.

In his visit, Mollet was closeted with Robert Lacoste, French minister-minister. He was reported to have signed a new statute aimed at setting up a new, liberalized rule in Algeria.

Some Paris newspapers said the Mollet government planned to introduce the new statute before the 22-month-old nationalist rebellion was put down. Since Mollet became premier in February, he has been insisting that Algeria first be "pacified." Elections would follow, then administrative changes would be discussed.

MRS. LUCE CANCELS PLANS TO RESIGN, SUEZ BLAMED

ROME, Sept. 8 (UP)—Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, United States ambassador to Italy, said today that the Suez Crisis had caused her to cancel her plans to resign next month.

She was commenting on press reports which said the White House had persuaded her to postpone her scheduled resignation on Oct. 1. Mrs. Luce said she had written to President Eisenhower saying she wanted to resign the Rome post Oct. 1.

"The President told me to hold off any announcement until I got a letter from the State Department," Mrs. Luce said. "The first I have heard since then are these Washington reports."

RUSSIANS SAID TO HAVE TURNED DOWN BONN PLEA

Adenauer Urged Moscow to Open Negotiations With West on Reich Unity.

BONN, Sept. 8 (AP)—Soviet Russia has promptly stepped on West German Chancellor Adenauer's bid for secret diplomatic negotiations for German reunification through free elections.

In notes to Washington, London, Paris and Moscow, the Adenauer government yesterday asked Russia to open new negotiations through diplomatic channels with the Western powers on German unification.

The proposal offered to link Soviet ideas on a European security system and a disarmament agreement with German unification in an effort to break the 11-year deadlock on the partition of Germany.

Eden's Proposal. It also mentioned British Prime Minister Eden's plan for a demilitarized buffer zone along the Oder-Neisse line, East Germany's present eastern frontier, in an effort to convince the Soviet Union it would have no need to fear aggression from a united Germany.

Moscow dispatches said Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, in Moscow, had rejected the Bonn plea.

He was said to have told Hase in a 45-minute talk that "the reunification of Germany is a question of freedom and rights" in West Germany made German reunification impossible.

Gromyko was taking a rap at the West German constitutional court's recent decision that the West German Communist party illegal.

The Soviets showed no more interest than before in settling the German problem through free all-German elections.

No Signs of Retreat. Gromyko showed no signs of retreating from the Moscow position that German unity could be worked out only in direct negotiations between the East German and West German governments themselves.

East German Communists in public statements have indicated that they would insist on measures for communizing West German industry in such negotiations. The Bonn government refuses to go into direct negotiations with East Germany, which it considers a puppet government.

The British Foreign Office and the United States State Department welcomed the long expected initiative of the Bonn government in pressing for reunification talks.

So did opposition Socialists and Free Democrats in West Germany. The opposition parties, however, complained that the Adenauer notes contained no really new overtures and were likely to be barren of results.

Adenauer's government today declined to comment on the Soviet adverse reaction. Officials said they would make no statements pending the official Soviet reply.

Communist East Germany today denounced West Germany's unification note as a "propaganda maneuver" to gather votes for Adenauer's Christian Democratic party next fall.

Dr. Otto Y. Schmidt, Noted Russian Arctic Explorer, Dies

He Was Director of Soviet Northern Sea Route Administration in 1930s.

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (AP)—Dr. Otto Yulievich Schmidt, chief of the Soviet Northern sea route administration in the 1930s, died yesterday after a long illness. He was 64 years old.

Dr. Schmidt, a noted explorer, commanded the first expedition ever to sail in a single season through the ice-packed northeast passage from the north Atlantic to the Pacific.

The 1933 voyage paved the way for regular shipping through the cold seas north of Europe and Asia.

A year later, attempting to duplicate the trip, his ship was swept northward by a typhoon just a few miles short of the Pacific. It was crushed and sunk in the ice floes and 101 persons—including 10 women and two children—were marooned for three months on the ice.

Rescued by Planes. Their plight gripped the imagination of millions throughout the world. They stayed alive by eating polar bear flesh. Soviet planes finally rescued the party. Dr. Schmidt, suffering from pneumonia, was flown to Nome, Alaska, for treatment.

En route home, he was feted as a hero in the United States. A great crowd thronged the railroad station in Moscow to greet him. Dr. Schmidt was awarded the Order of the Red Star. Four years later he was given the Order of Lenin and the title "hero of the Soviet Union."

A geographer and mathematician, he also at various times held the post of Moscow University, chief editor of the Soviet Encyclopedia, and director of the Soviet state publishing house.

EPPING GIVEN 4 TO 5 YEARS FOR CONSPIRACY ON HIS GUILTY PLEA

Hodge Assistant Eligible for Parole on State Charge in 38 Months — Federal Hearing Monday.

By ROBERT H. COLLINS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 8.—Edward A. Epping, of Lebanon, former executive assistant to ousted state Auditor Orville E. Hodge, was under sentence today of four to five years in state prison after pleading guilty in circuit court here to charges of conspiracy to steal more than $637,000 from the state.

Sentence was set yesterday by Circuit Judge DeWitt S. Crow, who ruled that four-to-five-year sentences on each of 53 conspiracy counts would run concurrently. Epping will be eligible for parole in 38 months.

George Carbery, special assistant to Attorney General Latham Castle, said he had been informed last week that Epping was under sentence to five years in state prison after pleading guilty in circuit court here to charges of conspiracy to steal more than $637,000 from the state.

Judge Barnes had previously sentenced Epping after he pleaded guilty of Government charges of misapplying federally insured state funds. Epping is scheduled to appear in Chicago Monday.

Refuses to Drop Charges.
J. Waldo Ackerman, assistant state's attorney, refused to drop charges of embezzlement, forgery and confidence game against Epping.

"The defendant has pleaded guilty of conspiring to take $637,000 from the State of Illinois," Ackerman said. "The defendant knows the difference between right and wrong. He violated the state laws as well as a sacred trust. This is a very serious crime."

Hodge is now serving a 12- to 15-year sentence at Menard for his leading role in taking more than $1,000,000 from the state. Edward A. Hints, former president of the Southmoor Bank and Trust Co. in Chicago, is serving a one-to-three-year state sentence and a concurrent three-year federal term at Stateville Penitentiary.

Through the long hearing, Epping sat grim-faced but outwardly calm. When questioned by the judge, he answered distinctly and with short, direct replies.

When sentence was pronounced, Epping, a veteran of long service in World War I, stood very erect showing no sign of emotion. When he sat down, he lowered his head for a few moments and when he looked up again it was obvious he was fighting back tears.

Family With Him.
The dark-haired, boyish-looking Epping, father of two small children, was 38 years old today. Present in the courtroom were his wife, Eva Mae, who is expecting another child; his father, Edward J. Epping, and his brother, Robert H. Epping, both of Granite City.

Hugh Dobbs of Springfield, Epping's lawyer, described him as "mechanically involved" in the conspiracy but added that Epping was fooled by "this super confidence man Hodge just as everybody else was duped by him, including bankers, legislators, politicians and even the people of this own home town who last year selected him as their first citizen."

It was Epping who discovered a $526,000 shortage in the auditor's building and loan and closed bank trust funds, Dobbs told the court. He added it was Epping who forced Hodge to make restitution to the state.

Epping was a partner in F. M. Mesinger and Co., an East St. Louis accounting firm, which handled audits for the state. Epping was not a state employee but received $1000 a month for his executive assistance to Hodge.

Hodge Aid After Sentencing

STOLEN CAR'S DRIVER SEIZED IN 80 M.P.H. POLICE CHASE

Two traffic policemen in a scout car chased a stolen automobile at speeds up to 80 miles an hour today through five electric signals and five major stops before they arrested the driver on the Twelfth street viaduct.

The driver, who said he is Orville Fraley, 18 years old, 1800 block of South Ninth street, admitted, the officers reported, that he had stolen the automobile a short time earlier from a parking place in the 1000 block of Marion street. He also admitted, police said, that he is on parole from a six months' workhouse sentence for driving an automobile without the owner's consent.

Cpl. Howard Bigley and Patrolman Victor Pabis saw the machine speeding east in Lami street at 1:30 a.m., and followed it north in Twelfth street to the viaduct. A tin foil "jumper" had been used on the ignition in starting the machine.

ST. CLAIR COUNTY GROUP INDORSES NURSING HOME

Construction of a nursing home for infirm and chronically ill persons of St. Clair county, to be financed by a $1,100,000 bond issue, was recommended last night in a preliminary report by a special committee of the county Board of Supervisors.

The committee was appointed by Wetzell Harness, chairman of the board, several weeks ago to study the needs and make a recommendation.

The final report, calling for a 140-bed institution to be built on a county-owned, 40-acre tract on the northern outskirts of Belleville, will be presented to the board Tuesday night.

If the board approves without delay, the bond issue proposal will be submitted at the Nov. 6 election.

ST. LOUISAN AMONG THE 20 KILLED IN SANTA FE WRECK

Marcus W. Perkins, 1228A North Euclid avenue, was among the 20 Santa Fe Railway employees killed Wednesday in the collision of The Chief with a halted mail train at Springer, N.M., it was learned yesterday.

Perkins, 52 years old, a Negro was a pantry man on The Chief. He had been a railroad employee for 15 years.

His wife, Mrs. Era Ball Perkins, a St. Louis public school teacher, learned of the crash while listening to a radio newscast. She did not know until later that her husband had been killed.

Belief in Self as a 'Good Boy' Factor in Averting Delinquency

DETROIT, Sept. 8 (AP)—A young teen-ager's belief in himself as a "good boy" is a factor which insulates him against delinquency, a research team from Ohio State University believes.

Their findings in a year-long study were reported yesterday at the annual meeting of the American Sociological Society in Detroit.

The Ohio State study was based on 125 sixth-grade boys who were selected by school teachers as neither delinquent nor expected to become so even though they live in the highest delinquency area of Columbus.

Reported Dr. Walter C. Reckless, professor of social administration, "We felt that if we could determine what makes a good boy tick, then perhaps we might be able to get somewhere with delinquency prevention."

Earlier research in the field, he noted, has dealt chiefly with the traits and background of "bad" boys.

A series of self-evaluating tests given to the selected 12-year-olds and interviews with their mothers indicated to the research team that the boys regarded themselves as law-abiding and obedient.

The boys' answers also showed they considered themselves as stricter about right and wrong than most people, "that they attempted to keep out of trouble at all costs and... tried to conform to the expectations of their parents, teachers and others."

The boys believed that parental direction, good companions and work are among the things which "keep boys out of trouble."

The researchers said the

MORE POLICEMEN ON DUTY AT NIGHT URGED BY JURORS

Report Calls for Change in Law to Allow Shift — Proposes Increase in Judges.

A recommendation for a change in state laws to permit the St. Louis police department to place additional officers on night duty was made yesterday by the June term circuit court grand jury.

In its final report to Circuit Judge Michael J. Scott, the jury also urged that "one and preferably two more judges and courtrooms" be established in the criminal division to eliminate delays in trial of serious cases.

The jury also proposed adoption of an operating court schedule "that will assure the prompt trial of criminal cases during at least 45 weeks of the year." The present schedule of 36 weeks "is still totally inadequate," the report said.

On the subject of increasing police protection at night, the jury said that existing statutes required the force to be divided into three equal shifts. It urged the Legislature to change this law and grant the department flexible authority "to permit the most effective use of the police force."

More Crimes at Night.
The present system "has proven entirely ineffective because far more crimes are committed from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. than in the other 16 hours of the day combined," the jury said.

Asking that the Legislature also authorize an increase in the size of the police department, the report said that failure to take such action would make the legislators "personally liable for an increasing number of St. Louis citizens suffering serious bodily injury and death."

The jury also suggested that the planned new City Workhouse be built on city-owned property at Meramec Hills, the institution for delinquent girls on Dougherty Ferry road in St. Louis county.

Continued operation of the institution for girls would be "a gross waste of the taxpayers' money" because of the small number of inmates, the report said. It proposed that the girls be housed elsewhere so that the present cost could be used for the new Workhouse.

Recommendations Two As Warden. The report praised Peter Nicholas, acting warden at the Workhouse, and recommended that he be appointed warden on a permanent basis. It also suggested that Acting Warden Silvio Barbieri of City Jail be considered as permanent warden there.

At the Workhouse and at Missouri Hills, the city's institution for delinquent boys, the jurors found "an appalling lack" of activity and work programs, the report said. At Missouri Hills, "the primary activities of the boys seemed to be playing cards and smoking cigarettes," it added.

The jury did express agreement with a recommendation by last year's September term grand jury that a separate grand jury be established to handle special investigations. "We, too, found it physically impossible to continue to investigate and satisfactorily explore the special avenues of investigation along with our regular duties," the group said.

Members of Jury.
Arthur A. P. Farrell, an insurance broker, 533 Hamilton boulevard, was foreman.

Other members were Walter Cleiser, 4215 South Thirty-seventh street; Frank C. O'Leary, 5892 Cabanne avenue; Dave Muchnick, 604 Chestnut street; Lewis R. Shelke, 6322 Michigan avenue; Walter F. Sanders, 4100 Pennsylvania avenue.

Mrs. Eugene Brinkop, 4515 Magnolia avenue; Mrs. Frank A. Becker, 3667 Marceline terrace; Otto H. Eble, 6129 Coronado avenue; David Petersen, 6033 Potomac street; Mrs. Estelle D. Beffa, 3723A Chippewa street; and James S. Busch, 14 Lenox place.

Alternates were Walter J. Biesinger, 5959 Drury lane, and Mrs. Jessie L. Billings, 4344 Beethoven avenue.

Brothers and Sisters

MR. and MRS. ROBERT BROWN (left) and MR. and MRS. GEORGE BROWN leaving St. Stephen's Lutheran Church after double marriage ceremony today. The grooms are brothers and the brides are sisters.

TWO SISTERS MARRIED TO TWO BROTHERS

Two brothers and two sisters were married today in a double ceremony at St. Stephen's Lutheran Church, 515 Pendleton avenue, by Rev. J. H. Bergauer, chief operating officer. The eight-month wedding is based on arrests for all types of crimes, Bergauer said.

Arrests for serious automobile accidents totaled 105. The decline from 28 in June to 15 last month is believed to be due to an increase in the number of traffic tickets issued because of more police officers patrolling the roads and their increasing experience in traffic control. There were 205 tickets issued in June and 505 in August.

Bergauer added that the department dispatched 5591 radio calls to police cars of incorporated municipal departments since Jan. 1, exclusive of calls to the County Police Department's own cars.

BOY PLAYING ON ROOF HURT IN FALL THROUGH SKYLIGHT

Percy Nelson Jr., 12 years old, 4609 Newberry terrace, was injured seriously yesterday when he fell through a skylight at the Mount Rose Cornice Works, 4865 Page boulevard.

The boy, a Negro, said he was playing on the roof of the building when he plunged through the skylight 40 feet to the floor. He is in Homer G. Phillips Hospital with a skull fracture. Police went to the scene in response to a burglar alarm, set off when the boy fell through the skylight.

Mr. Cassimatis, who was 71 years old, died yesterday at a nursing home of complications which followed an operation last March. He lived at 7713 Brookline terrace, Richmond Heights. Among restaurants he operated are the Missouri Grill, 701 North Twelfth street, and the old Washington Restaurant at Broadway and Washington.

Surviving are his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Dorothea Tomaras, 23 Hill 'N Dale, Olivette, and two sons, Emanuel A. Cassimatis, 17 Lombardy lane, Sappington, and John Cassimatis, 8618 Brookshire avenue, University City.

JUBILEE TO FEATURE STYLE SHOW TONIGHT

Display Will Be in Geodesic Dome — Pageant Cast Parades Downtown.

The 1912 influence in styles this fall will be displayed in a fashion show at the Mid-America Jubilee at 9 o'clock tonight. Dresses marked by soft, Edwardian colors, the high Empire waist and slim, flowing lines will be worn by five models. Tweed suits for going back to school, heavy knit wear and dresses with slim sheath effect balanced by the bulky hat also will be displayed in the 30-minute show in the geodesic dome.

The emphasis on style at the exposition will be continued tomorrow with shows by the St. Louis millinery industry at 3 and 9 p.m. and a display of the latest hair fashions at 7:30 p.m.

The 400-member cast of "Heartland U.S.A." mighty spectacle show of the jubilee, donned costumes for a parade through downtown St. Louis at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Stars of the show, John Beal and Marys Watters, lined up with 16 Oklahoma Indians in full regalia and scores of extras attired in nineteenth century garb.

Hungarian and Polish dancers, the Aubuchon drill team of majorettes, the Second Regiment of Missouri Mounted Volunteer Rifles and other units turned out for the parade.

Line marches, starting from Third and Market streets, will west in Market to Fourth street, north in Fourth to Locust street, west in Locust to Twelfth boulevard, south in Twelfth to Market and east in Market back to the exposition grounds.

Tomorrow will be Lutheran day at the jubilee. A pageant dramatizing the history of Lutheranism in the St. Louis area will be presented in the exposition amphitheater at 3 p.m. More than 500 persons will take part, including the St. Louis Lutheran Hour choir and the Lutheran High School, Holy Cross Church, Lutheran Hospital nurses and St. Louis Lutheran Children's choirs.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know in my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight for the rights of all parties, never belong to any party; always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by "pencil," photography or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Against a Lien Law

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In recent editorial the Post-Dispatch has strongly recommended the passage of legislation enabling the state to take a lien on the property of the recipients of old-age assistance in Missouri.

It is claimed that this would reduce the case loads, thus making greater benefits available to the more deserving recipients without requiring increased appropriations by the state. The question immediately arises as to whom shall we designate as the "more deserving." Shall it be to those who have managed to acquire a modest home for their old age or to those who have been less thrifty (or more spendthrift) and own no home, thus requiring more assistance in order to live decently?

It seems timely to suggest that such a law would not be in the best general interest of the public:

1. It would be unfair to small-home owners for, in effect, it would force them to finance a major share of the benefits paid to those who own no property on which the state can attach a lien or even levy a tax.
2. It would discourage home ownership by low-income families.
3. It would impair the morale, prestige and security of many of our older people and their relatives.
4. It would literally blind people to the land, since it would conceivably be necessary to restrict or control the sale of property.
5. It could deprive old folks of badly needed funds for medical and other emergency expenses by prohibiting the sale of property.
6. It would lower the standard of living by the refusal of many deserving ones to accept assistance on such terms and by discouraging home ownership.
7. It would have a strong socialist tinge.
8. The desired effect on the economy would be appreciably minimized by administrative costs to the state and by reduced purchasing power.
9. Human values and the security of human beings cannot be reckoned entirely in savings of dollars and cents.

An Airman's Thanks

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I am an Airman who has been stationed at Scott Air Base, and I am now being transferred overseas.

St. Louis has been a most friendly city and, indeed, very considerate of the men in the service of our country.

My deepest thanks to the movie theaters, and to your Municipal Opera which allowed me free admission during my military training. Also, thanks to the St. Louis Cardinals.

I wonder why the military are charged admission to the Mid-America Jubilee? Possibly no one suggested free admission. How about it?

One View of Cyprus

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In its endeavor to discredit Archbishop Makarios of Cyprus, the British Government has violated even elementary principles of ethics. The methods it uses resemble those of totalitarian regimes. It is evident that such unprecedented tactics as reported in your paper on Aug. 27, set Britain to shame and damaged the prestige of the Western allies the world over.

For while the Western democracies burst out in righteous indignation at Communist injustices against religious personalities, the Tory Government impudently employs the same methods against Archbishop Makarios.

Such measures intended primarily to strangle the basic right of freedom of the Cypriot people put the Western world in a very precarious position, for the eyes of millions of uncommitted people throughout the world are focused on the rightful aspirations of the Cypriots.

It is manifest that the Eden Government has been exercising every evasive and equivocal means in order to smother the struggle of the Cypriots for self-determination.

In their Resolution 543 of the sixth session on Feb. 5, 1952, the General Assembly of the United Nations advocate that "all peoples shall have the right of self-determination." There are no justifiable grounds why the British refuse to abide with this humanitarian resolution.

I believe that the only righteous solution to this grave issue is the repatriation of Archbishop Makarios and the reopening of negotiations leading to the application of the principle of self-determination for that martyr island.

A Doer in City Hall

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I have lived for many years in the St. Louis area, and have watched many mayors come and go in our long march for progress.

No man in the past who ever held this office stood quite so tall among us as our own Raymond R. Tucker. Never before had a mayor of this city, in its long and colorful history, been beset with such problems as confronted this man.

The reason he has done so well is that he is a fighter—a fighter for human rights.

We finally have a "doer" in the City Hall. After so many dreamers and do-nothing sleepers, this man is a breath of fresh air. He has plenty of brains, class and energy for the City of St. Louis.

JULIUS J. MARTIN.

Adenauer's Idle Gesture

Those who cannot resist prophecy should find it easy as pie to outline the Kremlin's reply to Bonn's note requesting five-power negotiations on the reunification of Germany. Even before it was sent, Germans of all parties predicted that the request would be rejected. And they put the blame on Chancellor Adenauer and his weakening regime.

Such hope as there might have been—and it could have been only very slight—for a favorable response undoubtedly was dashed when Dr. Adenauer forced through the ruling which outlawed the tiny and powerless West German Communist party. Only an angry reaction to this could be expected in Moscow; and when Bonn charged that the Russian comments were an unwarranted interference in German affairs, Dr. Adenauer's standing with the Kremlin must have dipped to zero.

It is difficult to believe that any German diplomat deemed the action against the Communists an auspicious prelude to reunification talks. That is why it was so widely deplored in the German press. Driving the handful of German Reds underground was not considered a help in the safeguarding of democracy, but the deeper protest was against the raising of yet another barrier to reunification.

The Russians have long told Bonn that this issue should be settled between the West and East German regimes. The latter, of course, is a Russian puppet; but since "possession is nine points of the law" many West Germans have reached the conclusion that the effort for reunification should be made on any level dictated by Moscow. They are not happy about an approach to East Berlin, but they see no way of forcing a different approach on Moscow.

From the legal point of view German reunification still is a matter for the occupying powers. But in view of Western preoccupation with Suez, Algeria and other troubles, many Germans feel that while Washington, London and Paris still favor reunification, they may be slow to take the initiative in achieving it. The Russians are even more content to let matters stand as they are at least until after next year's German elections.

So the Adenauer government's latest diplomatic move probably made little real difference, except in West Germany. There, undoubtedly, the note has further reduced the government's waning popularity.

Smearing Mr. Javits

The first victim of the McCarthy type of political smear in this campaign is a Republican—Attorney General Jacob K. Javits of New York.

Mr. Javits, who served in the national House of Representatives for eight years before his election to state office at Albany in 1954, is under consideration for the G.O.P. nomination for the seat being vacated by Senator Lehman. Political enemies of Mr. Javits have set off a whispering campaign that he was a member of Communist-front organizations 10 years ago.

To stop this vicious smear, Mr. Javits asked the Senate Internal Security subcommittee to hear him under oath. Appearing at his own initiative, the New Yorker said that in 1946 when he first ran for Congress he talked with Dr. Bella V. Dodd, secretary of a teachers' union and director of political activities of the New York Communist party.

That was a decade ago, when this country was very friendly with its World War II ally and Gen. Eisenhower was developing his friendship with Red Marshal Zhukov. It makes no sense to appraise it solely in the light of 1956, particularly since Dr. Dodd has renounced Communism and has since helped the Government many times.

Mr. Javits may or may not be the man to run against Mayor Wagner of New York City for the Senate. But if he is not selected, this smear ought not be the slightest factor. Actually this is only a measure of the damage that is still being done by McCarthyism in the United States.

When Sheriffs Peek

The wartime necessity for secretiveness and its carry-over into the post-war years was bound to produce something more dramatic than reporters' protests about the withholding of Washington news.

Respect for matters "confidential," "classified" and "top secret" naturally spread to law enforcement officials at the state and local level. For a long time two Virginia deputy sheriffs watched an increasingly elaborate operation in the hills. Questions asked of the men on the scene brought the polite but firm answer: "Secret work for the Pentagon."

Folks in the nearby town felt rather proud and important; and also a bit worried. It was nice to have something big going on almost in your backyard. On the other hand, the thing might go off and move the whole community from Virginia to the moon.

Maybe this fear—or perhaps less than complete respect for the Pentagon—finally induced the deputies to take a look. They found an elaborate moonshine still.

Moral: What is going on at Oak Ridge?

A Phrase of Many Meanings

"Land reform" is a term with multiple meanings. In the Philippines it has meant giving new untitled land to farmers. In Italy and Guatemala it has meant breaking up large land holdings to provide small individual farms. But in Spain it means almost the reverse, for Spain is trying to make small farms into bigger ones.

For centuries, Spanish inheritance laws in most provinces provided that a farmer's land should be distributed equally among his children. Hence many land holdings grew smaller and smaller, until today the plots are too small to support a farmer or permit efficient farming. Often one owner has a dozen separated plots.

So in 1953 the Spanish Government began a program of land consolidation. It was required that at least 60 per cent of a community should favor land reforms before the program could be applied. To date, Richard Mowrer reports to The Christian Science Monitor, 347 communities in 20 provinces have appealed for land consolidation. In one area 5581 plots were reduced to 474, the number of plots per owner was reduced from 17 to 1.4, and their average area was increased from three acres to 33.

American economic aid has contributed to the Spanish program, as it has elsewhere. For it is not enough merely to provide land for the land hungry, whatever policy is used. They have to be given the tools and roads and other help necessary to efficient agriculture. In the end land reform ought to mean a better organization for a nation's food supply.

The Progress in Integration

In keeping one eye on isolated instances of mob action against integrated public schools, the nation should not lose sight of what has already been accomplished.

During this month of September, one Southern Negro student in nine is attending integrated public schools. This report from The Nation's Schools, school administration journal, counts 17 states as Southern. In these, some 2,500,000 Negro children still face the old pattern of school segregation. But 300,000 others are eligible to attend desegregated schools.

Perhaps it will seem that "one out of nine" is a small ratio and small progress. But only two full school years have passed since the Supreme Court's desegregation order in 1954, and in that time several hundred thousand Negro children have been given the right to an equal education which they were denied before. Missouri, for example, has led in the integration movement, but even Missouri cannot claim it would have acted so quickly without the Supreme Court order.

Most of the integration in the 17 states has taken place, of course, in the "border" states—Missouri, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Texas, West Virginia, Delaware and Maryland and the District of Columbia. No integration has occurred in the Deep South. This means that the present battle line for integration cuts across the Mid-South—Arkansas, Tennessee, North Carolina and Florida, which is not Deep South in attitude.

Hence the victory of the State of Tennessee over an agitated mob at Clinton was a considerable victory, not only for law and order or for Tennessee, but for the advance of better educational facilities for all American children. That advance should not be stopped in the Mid-South.

Dogs, Postmen and Psychology

Two interesting bits of information concerning dogs have appeared in the news recently. It is pleasing to learn from Postmaster General Arthur W. Summerfield himself that the Post Office Department has been making "real progress" in its campaign to prevent dogs from biting postmen. But it is a bit distressing to learn from the Wall Street Journal that a New York medical authority says canine mental cases are on the increase with dogs assuming "the tensions and neuroses of their masters."

Putting two and two together, it may be that dogs suffering from the tensions of the day, which most of us human beings know are terrific, are the ones who have done most of the sampling of the postmen. Anyway, Mr. Summerfield says considerable progress has been made by arranging face-to-face meetings so that an antagonistic dog can see that his master's mailman is really a kindly person.

If all this is so perhaps this dog-bites-mailman problem can be further alleviated if the postman, while undergoing a face-to-face meeting with a belligerent dog and his owner, sizes up the owner at the same time he is reassuring the dog. Then in cases where the dog continues to bite he might tell the owner something like, "My friend, I can see that you are worried and quite tense and that you pass all this on to your dog so he ends up by biting me. Why don't you relax?"

However, there is certainly a chance that the worried owner of the tense dog might reply something like, "Sure I'm worried and tense and all because you keep bringing me letters containing nothing but bills, bad news and boring inconsequential. Run along before my dog bites you again."

Nevertheless the odds are that more good than harm results from kindly postman, suspicious dog and tense—or calm—owner, whichever the case may be, holding friendly powwows whether psychology is applied or withheld.

Where the School Board Can Help

The School Board could win a number of friends by re-examining its immediate solution to the problem of providing schooling for children in the Pruitt housing project. Is there no other way out than to transport most of the children to schools in other parts of the city?

At least 100 parents living in the project have asked for the use of temporary portable schools in the project area. If this is not practicable, parents might be willing to accept temporary double-shifting of the crowded Pruitt school, or any other reasonable expedient that would keep their children nearer home.

This is a problem not principally of the School Board's making, although it now rests in the Board's lap; it grows in part from the failure of all agencies concerned with public housing to properly co-ordinate planning and activities.

Eventually school construction will catch up with the new housing. In the meantime, if the School Board can ease the personal hardships that abound in this transitional period, it will perform a real public service.

Ellender's New Look at Russia

Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana has long been a vigorous critic of the foreign aid program. Now, after a three-week tour of the Soviet Union, the Senator says he is coming home to advocate a "new look" in American policy toward the Soviets. He told the Associated Press:

"I don't want Communism, but I believe the Russians want peace just as we do. I would like to go for a trial period which is free of force or intimidation. Let's draw the Russians away from a pattern of military armament."

Evidently what Senator Ellender has in mind is an effort to bring the Soviet Union, as well as our European allies, into greater participation in the financing of economic development in the "ex-colonial" nations. It is foolish to spend huge amounts of money on arms when it could be used for other purposes, he says. He would like to see Russia help Egypt build the Aswan dam, and aid Indonesia and India "and any other countries that need it."

We cannot believe that Senator Ellender means that the United States should retire from the field and invite the Soviet Union to take over the financing of underdeveloped countries. If not, then his "new look" implies a reduction of military aid coupled with the internationalizing of economic aid.

Many other thoughtful leaders have suggested something similar—among them Prime Minister Nehru and Former Ambassador Chester Bowles. If people like Mr. Bowles can find common ground with foes of foreign aid like Senator Ellender, perhaps a new consensus is being formed that will permit a fresh and fruitful approach to the whole problem. Certainly these ideas are worth considering in the re-evaluation of foreign aid to be made by a citizens' committee headed by Benjamin F. Fairless.

An Indian View of Nasser

The Mirror of Public Opinion

New Delhi weekly views President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt as true national leader showing up the 'vulnerability of imperialism'; says British are not so worried about nationalization of Suez canal as over chain-reaction in neighboring countries.

From Shankar's Weekly, New Delhi

Nasser has seen the British for long; a man who lives with a lion learns to roar. What the political troglodytes of the old imperialism are really afraid of but dare not say aloud is not so much the fact of the nationalization of the Suez Canal Co. as the exuberant chain-reaction it will set off in neighboring countries.

The vulnerability of imperialism has been shown up by Nasser and so to the British mind he has become a figure of doom casting a fearsome shadow on the oil companies of Iraq, Iran and Saudi Arabia. Nasser relishes his role for, as he has stated, almost the first couplet he learned as a boy was: "Ya Azeer, Ya Azeer, Dihiya takhud al-jingleer" (Oh Almighty, Oh Almighty, Disaster overtake the English).

History's irreversible process is taking Nasser along the inevitable path of a social revolution which has to avail of all national wealth for the betterment of the country. A nation that has released its latent energies cannot make do with maudlin and insincere attitudes.

For imperialism everywhere, the sands of time are running out. It does not deserve even derisive compassion if it provokes newly liberated nations to smash the bourgeois altogether.

They have only themselves to blame.

A Letter in Shankar's Weekly. All the howl set up by the pack of aging colonialist lions (of both sexes—viz. Tory and Labor) infesting Westminster and Fleet street over the nationalization of a joint stock company registered in Egypt cannot confuse the world about the perfidy of some of the so-called Big Powers!

There was glib talk of the "thawing" of the cold war, there were mortified confessions of the horrors of another war, there was the invocation of the "Geneva Spirit," sanctimonious talk about cutting down of conventional and other arms and discontinuance of nuclear tests, and general and continuing lip-service to the need of peace on God's earth, of the "urge" to settle disputes by negotiation and not by attempts at must have been gravely wrong in Missouri when this state was almost alone in the furor created over ASC changes. Missouri probably had more protests filed in Washington and more columns of newspaper criticism than all other states combined. Now the gates are open by the Boone county committee's victory. Two other cases already had been appealed. With the reinstatement of the Boone County ASC, it is expected that Callaway and other counties will press their cases in Washington. If all do, there will be more than a score filed.

None of this will make Compton's protest look good in national Republican Administration eyes. Maybe the little man should pull in his neck.

Between Book Ends

Pattern of Man's Hand
PELICAN IN THE WILDERNESS, by Fraser Darling.
(Random House, 380 pp., $5.)

This is a book about America by a British naturalist and student of human ecology, and it is a remarkably warm, human, and scientifically valuable piece of work. There are few men who can look at our physical landscape and see there the pattern which man's hand has traced during the past 5000 years, and say what this means for man today and tomorrow. Fraser Darling is one of the few. His book is the fruit of many months spent trekking all over the country, by plane, train, car, boat, horse and hiking boot.

While he is a naturalist, scientist and lover of wilderness, he has an amazing keen eye for cities and towns, for food he eats along the way; for people, who serve it and eat it with him. He is a man constantly sensitive to his surroundings.

Thus, New York is truly cosmopolitan and tremendously stimulating; a sort of new Alexandria at a new crossroads of the world. In Washington he enjoyed the hospitality of the Cosmos Club. Of Chicago he said: "The city is smartness, Mexico City has warmth and artistry; he likes best its poor and finds that power tends to corrupt its rich. He praises American food as good on the whole—especially its quantity, variety, price and cleanliness—with exceptions, which he notes.

His Britishness gets Darling into occasional difficulties. He calls all mountain folk "hill-billies," a term not likely to endear him to people he will probably spend time with in the future. He erroneously credits the "bald knobs" of the southwest Ozarks to recent erosion caused by cattle grazing, rather than to the slower erosion of time.

Yet these are small matters in a book filled from beginning to end with fascinating interpretations of our American landscape. His understanding of the problems, as well as the aspirations, of our Alaska frontier is a fine example of ecological thinking.

One quotation may lure you to read: "Pelican in the Wilderness." "I wanted to see America—the climax states of forest, desert, natural and man-made, and to sit and contemplate in various natural and human habitats. Now I have seen this vast array of beauty from tropic to Arctic, from river flats to the tops of mountains, and alongside have seen something of the stumbling history of man—the animal species which ate the apple of consciousness and gained but a dim enlightenment."

LEONARD HALL.

From Tu Fu to Tolstoy

WORLD LITERATURE, by Joseph Remenyi and others. (University of Pittsburgh, 315 pp., $5.)

A book on the subject of world literature (a term coined by Goethe) might seem too broad in scope to satisfy more than our most general interests. We could also challenge the title "World Literature" since, except two essays on Arabic and Chinese, the book deals exclusively with European writing.

Despite such obvious shortcomings these essays, even by a different author on a different national literature, are quite varied and impressive. Among the 16 essayists, William Hung of Harvard discusses "China's Greatest Poet, Tu Fu." Henri Peyre of Yale describes the French literary scene and Romanian Princess Helena recalls the writing of her country before and after Communist occupation. There are other striking commentaries on such figures as Homer, Dante, Burns and Tolstoy as well as liberal samples of Arabic, Chinese, Hungarian and Romanian verse in translation.

Most provocative, however, is the opening essay by Joseph Remenyi of "The Meaning of World Literature" in which he regrets the "sharp division between the creative and common pattern of life." "For many citizens," he observes, "a broken fence is more of a headache than the breakdown of civilization, and the ennobling spirit of world literature, despite increased reading, is as strange to them as subtlety would be at a prize fight."

FREEHOLDERS AIM AT CHARTER DRAFT BY FEB. 1

Public Hearings Will Be Held Before Final
Document Is Drawn Up.

A target date of Feb. 1 for completion of a preliminary draft of a proposed new charter for the city has been set by the Board of Freeholders, it was announced yesterday by George L. Stemmler, the group's chairman.

The early draft will be printed and circulated, and will be subject to a series of public hearings before the board draws up a final document for submission to the voters.

The Freeholders, who were elected last May 8, have until next May 8 to make their report.

In response to questions by Stemmler, chairman of committee studying specific phases of municipal government said they expected to make reports on their surveys within the next two months.

Committees on executive and administrative departments and on corporate powers and taxation expect to submit drafts of proposed charter sections early next month and the committee on legislation and elections will report during November, it was announced. A partial report is also expected during November from the committee studying civil service provisions.

The freeholders, who resumed their work after a month's vacation period, approved a proposal for experimental telecasting of its sessions by the educational station, KETC.

The regular session of the board scheduled for Sept. 21 at 2:30 p.m. was reset for Sept. 20 at 8 p.m. to permit the experimental broadcast. The board also authorized committee chairmen to arrange for telecasting by the educational station of public hearings conducted by committees.

George L. Arms, operations manager for the station, told the board that similar broadcasts of the official deliberations of governmental agencies in other places by educational stations resulted in a renewed interest in governmental affairs among citizens. The board will determine after several trial telecasts whether to continue the practice.

SALEM METHODIST CHURCH TO MOVE

Congregation Founded 115
Years Ago Will Build New Church in Ladue.

By JOHN T. STEWART
Church Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Salem Methodist Church, which was founded in St. Louis in 1841, is moving to Ladue, the church announced this week. It is now located on North Kingshighway at Cote Brillante avenue.

A new church will be built on an 11-acre plot at the northeast corner of the Daniel Boone Highway (U.S. 40) and Lindbergh boulevard. An architect has been engaged, and the congregation expects that construction of the first unit of the new church will start this fall.

Until the first unit is built and ready for use, the congregation will hold Sunday services in a large room which it has leased in La Chateau Restaurant, 10405 Clayton road, one-fourth mile west of Lindbergh boulevard. An architect has been engaged, and the congregation expects that construction of the first unit of the new church will start this fall.

The church is moving out of the city because only a few members remain in its present neighborhood. It was explained that the church families now live in the city.

The Rev. C. Clark Leonard is the new pastor of Salem Church. He succeeded the Rev. John D. Tussey, who retired. The Rev. Mr. Leonard came here from Aldergate Methodist Church, Kansas City. He is a native of Salem, Mo., and a graduate of the University of Missouri, Columbia, and Garrett School of Theology, Evanston, Ill. In World War II the Rev. Mr. Leonard served four years in the Army field artillery.

Salem Church sprang from a mission which a young German missionary, Ludwig S. Jacoby, opened at Seventeenth and Carr streets. It was the first German Methodist church to be established west of the Mississippi river. The first building of the congregation was at Tenth and Cole streets; it is still standing. Later the congregation moved to Fifteenth and Cole streets, then to Page boulevard and Pendleton avenue. The church and parsonage at North Kingshighway and Cote Brillante were built in 1925.

New Pastor

THE REV. C. CLARK
LEONARD, recently appointed to Salem Methodist Church, which is moving to the county.

Two young men from Ladue Chapel will water theological seminaries this fall to prepare for the Presbyterian ministry.

Wade Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Albert Anderson, went to Louisville, Ky., today to enroll in the Presbyterian Seminary there. He is a graduate of Washington University, and has been a leader at Ladue Chapel in Sunday school, young people's fellowship and the college group.

Wilfred B. Long, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred E. Long of 5 Town and Country road, Ladue, will enter New College, Edinburgh, Scotland, Oct. 4. He was graduated from Yale University in June. Theological seminaries call their first second and third years "junior," "middle," and "senior" years, respectively, and Long will take his junior year at Edinburgh. Then he will return to the United States to complete his theological education at Yale Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.

Another member of Ladue Chapel, Richard Conrad, will return this fall to the Theological School of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., for his middle year. He is a graduate of the University of Ohio, Columbus, where his family lives. While Conrad was employed in St. Louis, he taught a Sunday school class, led the college group and coached drama in the congregation, and will take part in services here tomorrow at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Ladue Chapel will have its annual "going-to-college" communion at 4 p.m. tomorrow for college students and their parents in the congregation, and Conrad will take part in this service.

CHURCH RECRUITS FOR SEMINARIES

Three Young Men From Ladue Chapel to Serve Presbyterian Church.

Two young men from Ladue Chapel will water theological seminaries this fall to prepare for the Presbyterian ministry.

Wade Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Albert Anderson, went to Louisville, Ky., today to enroll in the Presbyterian Seminary there. He is a graduate of Washington University, and has been a leader at Ladue Chapel in Sunday school, young people's fellowship and the college group.

Wilfred B. Long, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred E. Long of 5 Town and Country road, Ladue, will enter New College, Edinburgh, Scotland, Oct. 4. He was graduated from Yale University in June. Theological seminaries call their first second and third years "junior," "middle," and "senior" years, respectively, and Long will take his junior year at Edinburgh. Then he will return to the United States to complete his theological education at Yale Divinity School, New Haven, Conn.

Another member of Ladue Chapel, Richard Conrad, will return this fall to the Theological School of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., for his middle year. He is a graduate of the University of Ohio, Columbus, where his family lives. While Conrad was employed in St. Louis, he taught a Sunday school class, led the college group and coached drama in the congregation, and will take part in services here tomorrow at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Ladue Chapel will have its annual "going-to-college" communion at 4 p.m. tomorrow for college students and their parents in the congregation, and Conrad will take part in this service.

Religion and Psychiatry Institute Will Study 'Role of the Father'

The fourth annual Institute on Religion and Psychiatry will be held at Shaare Emeth Temple, 6830 Delmar boulevard, University City, Oct. 5. It was announced this week.

Two major addresses will be given by Dr. Erich Fromm of New York, psychoanalyst, author and teacher. His address at the 8:30 p.m. session will be given in the main temple and will be open to the public. His subject will be "The Fatherly and Motherly Functions and Their Disruption."

Other sessions of the institute will be particularly directed to professional workers in the fields of religion and psychiatry. The institute is sponsored by the Men's Club of Shaare Emeth. An officer of the club said: "The many requests we have had from both professional and lay groups to continue this institute testify to the deeply felt conviction that such an institute, fulfilling a social and spiritual need."

The theme of the Oct. 5 institute will be "The Place of the Father in Modern Society." It was announced by Rabbi Burton E. Levinson.

"Everywhere there is growing evidence of the loss of the father's position in family life," Dr. Levinson said. "He is rapidly becoming an economic appendage, and is losing sight of his fundamental role."

"Underlying this lack of identity of the father with his family are great disturbances. In the solution of these problems, both religion and psychiatry have an important and significant role. It is to consider this important problem that we selected the 'Role of the Father' as the theme of our institute."

The institute was founded four years ago by the late Rabbi Julius Gordon of Shaare Emeth Temple, Cincinnati, O. Dr. Conrad Sommer, Dr. Thomas Thale, Dr. Melvin Rubinstein, and Dr. Bernard Cravant.

Dr. Fromm was born in Germany, and studied at the universities of Frankfurt, Munich, and Heidelberg. He was graduated in 1931 from the Berlin Institute of Psychoanalysis. He has lectured at the University of Frankfurt, Columbia University, Yale University, and the New School of Social Research, New York. At present he is an extraordinary professor at the National University of Mexico, Mexico City.

Dr. Fromm's latest book is "The Sane Society." His other books include "Man for Himself," "Escape from Freedom," "The Forgotten Language," and "Psychoanalysis and Religion." Dr. Henry has made field trips to study Indians of Brazil and Argentina. He has taught at the Instituto Politecnico Nacional, Mexico, and the University of Chicago. His books include "Jungle People" and "Doll Play of Pilaga Indian Children."

BENSON DISCUSSES
FARM POLICY AIMSSeeking Economy That Can Have Peace and Prosperity at Same Time.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson said yesterday that a major objective of the Eisenhower Administration is to develop a farm economy that "can have peace and prosperity at the same time."

Benson spoke at the closing session of the ninth biennial convention of the National Federation of Republican Women.

Earlier, Senator William F. Knowland of California, Republican leader of the Senate, told the 1200 women that nuclear weapons tests would have to be continued by the United States at least until "an adequate inspection system has been established."

Knowland charged that halting these tests, as suggested by Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic candidate for President, "would permit the Communists to get ahead of us in developing nuclear arms and thus endanger the life of every man, woman and child in the United States."

On farm economies, Benson said that while he would not minimize the "difficulties of the cost-price squeeze," the fifth was that farmers were giving up their farms "at a faster rate during the Truman administration than ever before or since," and that the percentage of farmers who own their farms is now at a record level.

BRAZIL'S INDEPENDENCE DAY

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 8 (AP)—Brazil yesterday celebrated its 134th anniversary of independence from Portugal with a full dress parade of 20,000 members of the armed forces.

President Kubitschek, Gen. Maxwell Taylor, United States Army Chief of Staff, members of diplomatic delegations and high government officials reviewed the parade from the War Ministry building.

Study Finds No Genetic Effects
Of Hiroshima, Nagasaki Bombs

Research Fails to Show Extreme Mutations Have Resulted From Atomic Radiation.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—The atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki 11 years ago had no measurable effect on subsequent births to exposed parents, it was reported today by the International Genetics Symposium in session here.

That was the general conclusion of a survey made under the auspices of the United States-Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission by two young geneticists from the University of Michigan. The survey included data on almost 30,000 terminated pregnancies.

The report was presented at the plenary session of the geneticists this morning by Dr. William J. Schull, assistant geneticist at the clinic. He was aided in the survey by Dr. James V. Neel.

Attacks Expected.

Gathering of the material was begun a year after the bombs were dropped on the two Japanese cities, in August 1945, and carries through 1955. The National Institutes of Health of Japan gave assistance to the research. The negative findings were expected to be attacked by some Japanese geneticists who have been predicting the possibility of extreme mutations in the genes of persons exposed to such radiation.

Doctors Schull and Neel themselves recognized that their study and findings were not the final word on the matter.

"We should like to be the first to recognize the unsatisfactory situation in which this study leaves us with respect to drawing firm conclusions concerning radiation-induced genetic changes in human populations," they said. "There seems to be agreement at all levels that, with the advent of the atomic age one of the most pressing questions in the entire field of human biology, including medicine, concerns the genetic problems created by exposure, for various reasons, of the human race to increasing amounts of high energy irradiation.

Many Studies Needed.

"The complexity of this problem is self-evident. The final evaluation on which a valid course of action can be based will depend on studies of many types, all carefully evaluated and cross-correlated. This study will have achieved its objective if, in the ultimate synthesis, it supplies one of the sets of observations to be taken into consideration."

The pertinent paragraph of their summary of the results attained was the following: "There is no real clear indication that the radiation history of parents has affected the characteristics of their children here under consideration. It should in this connection be pointed out that five of the six findings which give some indication of significance involve the element of maternal exposure, a fact which in view of the possibility of maternal somatic effects suggests the need for particular caution on reaching conclusions."

IN TRUST TO WIFE AND SONS

Sidney R. Baer, department store executive who died Aug. 25, left his estate in trust to his wife and two sons. It was disclosed yesterday with the filing of his will in probate court.

A trust fund of $500,000 was set up for Mrs. Baer. The residue was divided for division into three equal trust funds, one for Mrs. Baer and one for each son, Charles and Sidney Baer Jr. Value of the estate was not estimated.

The will explained that Mr. Baer, who was vice chairman of the board and treasurer of Sills, Baer & Fuller Co., had made large contributions to the St. Louis and Marie Baer charitable trust, a fund created in memory of his parents for aid to associates and others who might need assistance in old age.

WHEAT RANCHER
NETS NEAT PROFIT
ON TOBACCO CROP

LEWISTON, Idaho, Sept. 8 (AP)—Despite dark predictions by a southern tobacco expert, wheat rancher Joe Mayer sold his crop of Idaho leaf at a neat profit yesterday.

Mayer had written the Chamber of Commerce at Lexington, Ky., for advice on marketing the crop from 17 plants he bought while traveling in Kentucky. The chamber consulted an expert who said Mayer's crop would probably weigh five pounds and be worth about 50 cents a pound. But, said the expert, Mayer would have to sell the leaf under penalties since he had no marketing quota and the added cost of shipping to a southern market would put Mayer about $3.50 in the red.

Mayer found a local market in a "roll-your-own" smoke, who paid $17 for the tobacco and agreed to do his own curing.

"The Lexington chamber doesn't realize how big tobacco plants grow in Lewiston," said Mayer.

Stockhams Put Title Hopes on Young Miller Tonight

St. Louis Thumped, Score 14-6

By John J. Archibald
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.
BISMARCK, N.D., Sept. 8—
Hang on to your Confederate money, folks. That rebel-yelling South has risen again.

Just when the Stockham Legion players were thinking of spending most of the weekend in the homes they have been away from for so long, a gang from New Orleans played rock-and-roll music with their bats last night as St. Louis tried to get by with second-line pitching. The score—oh, the score—was 14 to 6.

But tonight should be a different story as the Stockhams get another chance to bring home the national championship of American Legion Junior baseball. St. Louis will have ready its star right-hander, Bob Miller, after he has rested since Wednesday.

New Orleans, unless its coaching staff chooses to be completely callous, will not use its No. 1 hurler, Jim Harwell, who last night pitched his second game in many nights. The Of String-Puller.

Harwell went eight innings Thursday against Roseburg, Ore., then pitched virtually an entire game against Stockham. Harwell was brilliantly effective as he mixed his fast ball and curve with a change-up pitch that the Stockhams had never before seen. It had such hitters as Ollie Sweeney and Rogers Robinson nearly dislocating their vertebrae trying to swing at it. But Harwell finally showed signs of giving out in the ninth. In that frame he allowed two of his total of three bases on balls as well as a hit as Stockham scored twice.

So if Harwell doesn't pitch, or even if he somehow does, it is likely that the Stockhams will be able to score enough runs to provide Miller with a safe margin if he is in any semblance of his normal self. The winner of tonight's game will be the Legion's new national champion.

Last night's game was hopelessly for St. Louis before New Orleans even had finished its first time at bat. Leroy Edwards was battered from the mound without retiring anybody and Relfer Joe Hendricks was sent home in the second. Fred Schueler, an outfielder who had only pitched one inning for Stockham this summer, finally came in to get the side out after New Orleans had scored 11 runs in the initial frame.

Schueler went on to hurl creditably, although he was wild. Fred, a lucky left-hander who has another year of Legion eligibility, permitted three runs and five hits in the six and one-third innings he worked. Robinson retired the side in the eighth.

Investment Runs?
Stockham fought back, despite the 11-run deficit. They nicked Harwell for two sharp hits in the second but didn't score. Then in the third inning they really helped themselves as far as tonight's game is concerned.

New Orleans tried to give Harwell a rest. The boy was sent to right field and Bill Esquerre was brought in to pitch. Here's how Stockham pitched him:

Schueler walked. Sweeney doubled hard to the left field wall, scoring Schueler. Robinson shot the ball over second for a single. Bob Miller grounded out, but Jerry Nauer singled, scoring Sweeney and Robinson. Exit Esquerre. Harwell trudged back to the mound and Stockham once more had to struggle.

It was too tough, of course, having to go the long way against a fine pitcher. Stockham had 10 hits in all, two by Root and two more by Goudy. Larry's average dropped with the two-for-five, but still is .456.

The Unlucky Eleven.
In that first inning, after Stockham went down in order in their half, here is how New Orleans scored its 11 runs:

Edwards walked the leadoff man. Then came a single, another walk, a single, another walk, a double. That was all for Edwards, and with the score already 5-0, Hendricks came in.

There was a single, a pop fly out, a walk, a single, another walk, a fielder's choice, a walk and a double.

That made in 11-0 and Coach Al Grosch sent in Schueler. Fred walked his first batter, but

Mancheste Is Winner Again In Title Play

The host Mancheste team topped out the Tillmans, the Nebraska state champions, 3-2, today for its second victory in the regional tournament of the American Softball Association at Manchester. The game went two extra innings, a single by Pinchhitter Walter Kidd with two on in the ninth winning for Manchester.

Four games last night opened the tournament at Manchester. The host Mancheste team topped out the Tillmans, the Nebraska state champions, 3-2, today for its second victory in the regional tournament of the American Softball Association at Manchester. The game went two extra innings, a single by Pinchhitter Walter Kidd with two on in the ninth winning for Manchester.

In the remaining contests both of which were decided by 1-0 scores the Parrots of Springfield, Mo., downed the Fallstaffs of Omaha, Neb., and the Watkins Team of Omaha edged the Bankers of Tampa, Kan.

In the Thurmer's game, the Nighthawks jumped off to a one run, second inning lead. The Thurmers went ahead in their third on a home run by centerfielder, Ken Heck. His brother, Ed, added the second score when he reached first on an error, advanced to second on a fielder's choice and tallied on Gale Wuest's Texas leaguer.

The Nighthawks scored two more in the sixth to go ahead, but the St. Louis team tallied twice as a result of poor fielding by Des Moines. Hank Thole, the first batter up, walked and pinch hitter Ed Turek bunted safely. The next two men were retired but the runners advanced. Ed Heck then popped to first baseman Ed Thomas who dropped the ball allowing the tying and winning runs to score.

The Watkins team, last year's regional champions, were held in close check by the spectacular hurling of Tampa's Harland Fiesinger who struck out fifteen. However, loose play by Fiesinger's teammates led to the single Watkins run. Ron Seger, the champ's second baseman opened the fourth inning with a single, stole second and when the ball eluded the advanced to third. Seger, who is a sergeant on the St. Louis police force, proved that even a policeman should be closely watched as he stole home with the deciding run.

Mancheste Is Winner Again In Title Play

By Neal Russo

The host Mancheste team topped out the Tillmans, the Nebraska state champions, 3-2, today for its second victory in the regional tournament of the American Softball Association at Manchester. The game went two extra innings, a single by Pinchhitter Walter Kidd with two on in the ninth winning for Manchester.

In another game this morning, Bob's Mart of Kansas City defeated the Nighthawks of Des Moines, 6-2.

Four games last night opened the tournament at Manchester. The host Mancheste team topped out the Tillmans, the Nebraska state champions, 3-2, today for its second victory in the regional tournament of the American Softball Association at Manchester. The game went two extra innings, a single by Pinchhitter Walter Kidd with two on in the ninth winning for Manchester.

In the remaining contests both of which were decided by 1-0 scores the Parrots of Springfield, Mo., downed the Fallstaffs of Omaha, Neb., and the Watkins Team of Omaha edged the Bankers of Tampa, Kan.

In the Thurmer's game, the Nighthawks jumped off to a one run, second inning lead. The Thurmers went ahead in their third on a home run by centerfielder, Ken Heck. His brother, Ed, added the second score when he reached first on an error, advanced to second on a fielder's choice and tallied on Gale Wuest's Texas leaguer.

The Nighthawks scored two more in the sixth to go ahead, but the St. Louis team tallied twice as a result of poor fielding by Des Moines. Hank Thole, the first batter up, walked and pinch hitter Ed Turek bunted safely. The next two men were retired but the runners advanced. Ed Heck then popped to first baseman Ed Thomas who dropped the ball allowing the tying and winning runs to score.

The Watkins team, last year's regional champions, were held in close check by the spectacular hurling of Tampa's Harland Fiesinger who struck out fifteen. However, loose play by Fiesinger's teammates led to the single Watkins run. Ron Seger, the champ's second baseman opened the fourth inning with a single, stole second and when the ball eluded the advanced to third. Seger, who is a sergeant on the St. Louis police force, proved that even a policeman should be closely watched as he stole home with the deciding run.

MOTHER FAINTS AT FUNERAL OF KIDNAPED BABY

Grief-Stricken Parents
See Only Part of Simple Graveside Ceremony.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 8 (AP)—The body of six-week-old Cynthia Ruotolo was buried today, but the grief-stricken parents saw only part of the brief, simple ceremony at the grave.

The mother, Mrs. Eleanor Ruotolo, collapsed at the grave before the casket was lowered.

The baby's father, 33-year-old Stephen, caught his wife as she started to fall at St. Bernard's cemetery, about seven miles from the big Hamden department store where the baby was snatched from her carriage just a week ago today.

Mrs. Ruotolo sobbed quietly as she and her husband, accompanied by a state policeman, arrived at the grave. She gave a small cry as she stood to the left of a praying priest, the Rev. Gerald Mullins. Then she started to fall.

Her husband, an $80-a-week salesman, picked her up and carried her to an automobile and left the cemetery.

There had been some question as to whether Ruotolo would attend the funeral. Coroner James J. Corrigan had said that Ruotolo had refused to believe that the body recovered from Lake Whitney Thursday was that of his baby. Although investigators and members of the baby's family are satisfied "beyond question" that the baby found is Cynthia, Ruotolo has refused to agree. Corrigan last night quote Ruotolo, 35 years old, as declaring earlier that the body is that of a child too large to be his daughter. Members of Ruotolo's family, it was said, have been unsuccessful in their efforts to change his mind.

(The International News Service reported Corrigan said he tried to explain to Ruotolo that a body in the water for a week would swell.)

Corrigan said that no footprint record of the baby had been made when she was born, a practice discontinued by the hospital several years ago.

Corrigan added there is no doubt as to the identity of the dead child. Mrs. Eleanor Ruotolo, and her mother, Mrs. Anna Monte, both made positive identification, the coroner said, as did the pediatrician and a visiting nurse who had cared for Cynthia.

In addition, he continued, the woman who made the clothing the child was wearing when her body was found by three boys on a fishing trip, identified her handiwork. She was Mrs. Pauline Amento, a long-time friend of the family, who recognized the cloth and the "unusual" stitching in the gown on Cynthia's body.

There was no question that investigators would continue through the weekend their tollsome efforts to separate fact from fancy in the bizarre case.

For although Corrigan said he did not know when he'd resume his phase of the inquiry, Assistant Attorney General said "we'll be at it over the weekend."

Gorman would not say if that meant more questioning of witnesses or a rechecking of state-

EXPERT PREDICTS TRIP TO THE MOON BY CENTURY'S END

LONDON, Sept. 8 (AP)—An American rocket expert told a British audience tonight man will land on the moon before the end of this century.

Addressing the British Interplanetary Society, F. C. Durant III, a staff member of a firm of consultants to the United States Defense Department, said:

"Within 10 years the scientists will have man flying into space in a man-made satellite. Within 25 years man should be flying around the moon."

He said that the next logical step would be landings there. "I confidently predict that the first lunar landing from the earth will be achieved before the end of this century."

Durant is president of the International Astronautical Federation. From 1948 to 1951 he was director of engineering at the naval air rocket test station, Dover, N.J.

He said the first man to explore the great spaces beyond the earth can weigh as much as 200 pounds and take 400 pounds of equipment with him.

"I estimate that the first trip will take anywhere from six hours to a day," he said.

ments and other information, including a quantity of bed clothing, a baby's crib and a set of golf clubs removed late yesterday from the Ruotolo home in Hamden.

25,522 Germans Quit East Zone. BONN, Sept. 7 (AP)—The West German Refugee Ministry announced today that 25,522 East Germans fled to the West in August—a new high. This brought to 192,921 the number who have arrived in West Germany and West Berlin in eight months of this year.

G.O.P. ANSWERS STEVENSON TALK ON SCHOOL BILL

Congressman Blames Democrats for Not Backing Distribution on Basis of Need.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Representative Samuel K. McConnell (Rep.), Pennsylvania, said yesterday that Adlai Stevenson was misinformed or "he deliberately misinterpreted the facts" when he spoke of Eisenhower Administration "failures" in the field of education.

Referring to a statement which the Democratic presidential nominee put out earlier yesterday in Chicago, McConnell said Stevenson "seems to be confusing the facts in this campaign." He added:

"One fact which he is presently confusing is that it was the Democrats and not the Republicans who defeated President Eisenhower's school construction bill."

McConnell, ranking Republican on the House Education Committee, said in a statement that "Democrats must take the responsibility for defeating the bill 'by refusing to back' an amendment he sponsored to distribute federal school aid on the basis of need."

Poor Formula.

"Most of the Republicans who voted against the bill on final passage, did so because of the poor Democrat allocation formula it contained," he said.

The congressional record lists McConnell as voting "present" when the House took final action on the measure, which would have distributed classroom construction aid on the basis of school-age population.

Stevenson, in his statement on education, said he has found "people indignant about the failures of the Eisenhower administration in this field," adding: "In 3½ years the total accomplishment is a fact-finding conference. We already know the facts. Our need is not for facts, but action on the facts."

Bridges Also Critical.

Another attack on Stevenson's recent campaigning was made by Senator Styles Bridges (Rep.), New Hampshire, who described as "ridiculous" the Democratic nominee's assertion that Republicans "seldom follow" President Eisenhower in Congress.

"The truth is President Eisenhower got far more support for his program from the Republicans than he did from the Democrats," said Bridges in another Republican assault on Stevenson's speech before the International Association of Machinists Wednesday in San Francisco.

Bridges, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, said: "On record votes in the Senate in the Eighty-fourth Congress involving the Eisenhower program, a majority of the Republicans supported President Eisenhower 90 per cent of the time, while the Democrats voted for his program only 53 per cent of the time."

Bridges said the platform adopted by the Democrats at Chicago last month is "full of wild promises which, badly split as they are, they could not possibly carry out in Congress and which, on the record, their leaders would not even attempt to carry out."

FEDERAL JURY TO RESUME
WORTMAN INQUIRY MONDAY

Full-scale federal grand jury inquiry into the activities of Frank (Buster) Wortman, gang boss, is scheduled to be resumed Monday in East St. Louis with about 25 witnesses called to appear.

United States Attorney Clifford Raemer, who announced that the jury, in recess since Aug. 30, would be recalled, said witnesses would include personal associates of the East Side gangster as well as some legitimate business men with whom he is reputed to have had dealings. One prospective witness, Tom Berry, former Belleville slot machine operator, has not been located, Raemer said.

The jury, which began its inquiry July 17, was recessed to permit federal investigators to develop leads which cropped up during the continuing investigation.

GASOLINE TRUCK DRIVER IS BURNED IN EXPLOSION

Harold W. Klomp, truck driver for Goldbach Petroleum Co., was burned on the legs and chest yesterday in an explosion when he was unloading gasoline at a service station at 6820 Olive Street road, University City.

Klomp, 42 years old, of South Lindbergh boulevard, Sappington, was released after treatment at St. Louis County Hospital. University City firemen extinguished flames in the basement of the station, where Klomp had been piping white gasoline from his truck into drums.

THREE GRADUATES ADMIT
PLANTING 'BOMB' AT SCHOOL

Three June graduates of Alton High School have admitted planting a "time bomb" that exploded harmlessly yesterday on the lawn of the high school.

All three youth showed a strong scientific bend during their high school careers and one was a scholarship winner on graduation. The deed was regarded as a prank to create a diversion among the students during mid-morning classes.

Only visible results of the explosion were a plume of black smoke and a small hole in the lawn. The noise was mistaken by Principal G. J. Davis for a tire blowout.

TRUMAN SAYS
PRESIDENT SHIFTS
RESPONSIBILITY

have undermined confidence in the United States throughout the world.

The former President said that he visited many heads of state on his recent tour of Europe and they all wanted to know what the foreign policy of the United States was. He said he couldn't give them any help because he can't figure it out himself.

Truman mentioned Eisenhower's name only once in his 35-minute speech. That was in connection with a speech the President made last April to the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington in which the President said that the United States was winning the cold war. Truman commented that the editors in a poll by a 2 to 1 margin voted thereafter that the United States is losing the cold war to the Communists.

He heaped scorn on what he called a new "concept" that a President's subordinates are responsible for the affairs of the executive branch. In that case, he said, the Constitution should be rewritten to read that "the executive power should be invested in the President's assistants and he shall not be responsible for anything they do or unless it turns out to be successful."

Cites Examples.

Specific areas in which Truman said the Chief Executive had dodged responsibility were in the mixup over Salk vaccine distribution, the Wolf Meade-Johnson case in which the latter was fired by one government agency as a security risk and rehired almost immediately by another, the attacks by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep., Wis.) on former Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens, "political smear" by Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

He also did not think much of the way President Eisenhower honored Secretary of the Air Force Harold G. Gurnea for being involved in an alleged conflict of interest case.

The Eisenhower Administration's slogan of "dynamic conservatism" also was criticized because in its operation it reminded him of free slavery and the square circle.

Other items of the administration's operations which came in for heavy Truman fire were the "right money" policy which, he said, boosted mortgage and consumer credit costs to benefit banks, insurance companies and corporations.

He also struck at the Republican campaign slogan of 1952 calling for a change in Washington, asserting that the only change he had been "small change and it went to the farmers and small business men." Between 1952 and 1955 small business profits fell 52 per cent while those of the large corporations went up 61 per cent, Truman said.

The former President received a standing ovation upon his introduction by Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem., Minn.), as a man whose words and deeds are a glorious chapter in our history.

Truman dressed in blue and wearing a white shirt and dark tie spoke against a background including a miniature reproduction of the White House. Overhead was a large sign bearing a portrait of Woodrow Wilson. The assemblage of the political scientists was in observation of Wilson's centennial year. The late President once was president of the organization.

Hagerty Says Truman Will Be Answered With Facts.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP).

The White House said today charges against the Eisenhower Administration by former President Truman and others will be answered "with facts" as the campaign proceeds.

The statement was made by president press secretary James C. Hagerty when asked to comment on Truman's speech last night in which the former President accused Mr. Eisenhower of "passing the buck" to subordinates in order to maintain his popularity.

"That's one of the reasons Republican National Chairman Leonard Hall said today that the Republican truth squads following Truman," Hagerty said.

Meanwhile, the Republican national committee issued a statement by Representative Clarence J. Brown of Ohio saying "because they have the night in which the former President Truman is smearing our great President and other Democrats are smearing Vice President Nixon. . . This is like a small boy trying to drop a flying Fortress with a pea shooter. . ."

ports minimized the possibility that Britain and France would use force to try to settle the crisis caused by Egypt's nationalization of the Suez Canal Co. Both England and France have built up their military forces in the eastern Mediterranean.

Egyptians, however, feared the zero hour of a British-French attack was near. They no longer thought the two nations were bluffing with their mass force on Cyprus and at other staging areas.

Egyptian sources said only United States intervention could prevent the use of force by Britain and France. Washington officials speculated the implied call for American intervention was an Egyptian attempt to split the Western Big Three.

The Menzies committee came to Cairo Sunday with the plan adopted by 18 of the 22 nations at last month's London conference for establishment of an international board to run the 103-mile waterway. The United States, Iran, Ethiopia and Sweden were the other nations on the committee.

The talks have been conducted in secrecy. Aside from reports that the discussions were friendly, neither side leaked any information on the arguments. However, rumors circulated in Cairo that sharp differences of opinion had developed over the Menzies mission itself.

These rumors said Menzies and United States Deputy Secretary of State Loy Henderson disagreed over the amount of authority the committee had to negotiate a compromise.

It was also reported that Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Ardebil veered toward Nasser's views, that Ethiopian Foreign Minister Abebe Aklilu held firm for the 18-nation canal internationalization proposal and that Swedish Foreign Minister Olof Uggla's main concern was obtaining assurances of freedom of navigation through the canal.

There was no confirmation of any of these reports and the committee spokesman denied any disagreement.

BRITAIN STUDIES
REFERRAL TO U.N.

New York Times News Service.

LONDON, Sept. 8—The British government has begun a study of possible ways of referring the Suez canal dispute to the United Nations.

Although Sir Anthony Eden's Cabinet has made no final decision on the matter, authoritative disclosures yesterday of the government's "tendency" to bring the U.N. into the Suez situation mark a significant shift in policy.

Until this week the government's view was that the delays likely to be imposed by U.N. consideration of the Suez problem would permit President Nasser's nationalization of the canal to become a fait accompli. This prospect was regarded as damaging to British prestige and dangerous to Britain's oil lifeline to the Middle East.

Immediately after Nasser nationalized the canal on July 26, Britain froze Egypt's sterling area assets and started newly-mobilized reinforcements moving to the Middle East. The government said the armed

"Like all of you," the candidate said, "regardless of partisanship, I believe in what you call the 'white man's burden.' I have felt a deep hurt at the recent revelations of almost unbelievable abuse of the obligations of stewardship of this state's affairs."

He praised Austin as "a fine man, a man of effective integrity, a real fighter for what you and I believe in," and said he would be a "worthy opponent" for the Republican candidate, Gov. William G. Stratton.

CLINTON NEARLY NORMAL AGAIN

CLINTON, Tenn., Sept. 8 (AP)—This east Tennessee town, a hotbed of anti-integration rioting last weekend, confidently prepared to take over police duties from the National Guard.

The board of mayor and aldermen passed three restrictive emergency ordinances yesterday designed to head off future trouble. An auxiliary police force was made ready to assist local authorities in maintaining order.

No date has been set for the departure of the last of the 633 guardsmen who moved in Sunday to quell rioting precipitated by the integration of the high school.

With school in recess until Monday and an air of calm prevailing, authorities anticipate no trouble during the weekend.

To maintain the peace, the city government adopted stern measures which call for a 7 p.m. curfew on persons under 21 years, forbidding outdoor assemblies without a permit, and prohibition of public address systems.

John Kasper, a fiery segregationist from Washington, D.C., blamed by Clinton officials for much of the strife, was released at Knoxville in $10,000 bond yesterday while awaiting appeal from a ruling holding him in contempt of federal court.

Kasper was sentenced to one year in prison and fined $10,000 for a restraining order against interfering with the peaceful integration of the Clinton school.

Ambassador Loy Henderson, American representative at the Cairo talks, was expected to fly home quickly to give Dulles a first-hand report to guide him in search for a formula which might allow talks to be renewed later.

Officials acknowledged the prospects were not rosy. They said Nasser had been far less yielding in the Cairo talks than had been hoped.

The increased optimism that Britain and France would not use force against Egypt, despite French-British military moves in the Mediterranean, seemed to grow from what was regarded as growing opposition to such a course by the British public.

ILLINOIS CAB DRIVER SAYS HE WAS ROBBED IN ST. LOUIS

Vern Cochran, a Madison taxi driver, reported to police last night that he was robbed of $3 by two men he picked up at Granite City and drove to St. Louis.

He said the two men, who he described as "niggers," took him to the head of a street where he called for help.

In the 2100 block of Salisbury street, Cochran said, he was ordered to stop, and when he refused, the two men threatened to shoot him. The two men then took over, putting Cochran between them, and drove around for some time, finally striking a parked car and making a U-turn.

Lambert, a Negro, 3023 North Market street, told police he was accosted by two men of similar descriptions as he got into his automobile near his home. One displayed a revolver, he said, and the other took it away from him and they walked on.

VICTIM OF REEF

White water marks submerged rocks of Sonora reef, 50 miles north of Aberdeen, Wash., on which the freighter Seagate is hung up. The freighter, bound for Vancouver, B.C., from Japan, was 100 miles off course when it hit the reef Thursday. Efforts to free the vessel failed at successive high tides and the captain and crew abandoned it today, fearing it was breaking up on the rocks which ripped its hull.

Martha Carr's

OPINION

Today's column is devoted to teen-agers, who are invited to submit their problems to Martha Carr.

Dear Martha:

MY PROBLEM is that I have two boy friends who don't get along. I think one of them is going to ask me to go steady but I still like the other one and want to go out with him. He is mad at me, though, and won't ask me out. Should I go steady, wait, or let them both dangle awhile? I am 17.

I honestly can't see much sense in going steady unless it's with the person you want to be with more than any other. In other words, why tie yourself to one boy when you're interested in another? If he is angry because of something you have done, and if you have any way to apologize, maybe you can start dating him again. But aren't you jumping the gun? Why not wait until this boy asks you to go steady before making up your mind?

Dear Martha:

I LIKE A BOY very much. We have gone together for about seven months but suddenly he decided he didn't like me anymore. He's conceited and thinks he's better than anyone else. Don't you agree someone should tell him about it and maybe then he'll realize he's losing all his friends?

Be honest, now. Did you think he was conceited before he gave you the brush? Just because you've been hurt, are you going around talking about him? If he loses all his friends because of his conceit, he'll find out soon enough, although someone who is quite close to him could give him a hint. But I think you should stay out of the picture.

Dear Martha:

WHAT CAN I DO? My stepfather put me on punishment for a whole month because I went car riding after he had told me not to go. I have known the boy a long time. Do you think I should stay in for a month just because of this? The reason I went was that my friends laugh at me because I can't do what they do. Their folks let them go.

I know it's no fun to be laughed at, and I don't blame you for wanting to go with the crowd, but I wouldn't presume to say that your stepfather is right or wrong. The fact is that you disobeyed him, and this is his idea of appropriate punishment. He is only concerned for your welfare and even though you felt there was nothing wrong in what you did, it is true that many groups of young people riding around in cars do become rowdy and troublesome—and that makes it rough on all the others, like yourself, who merely want to have a good time without bothering anyone else. Also, many teen-age drivers are careless, hurting the reputations of those who drive cautiously. Instead of waiting for the crowd to ask you to go somewhere—then be embarrassed if you can't—why not invite them to your home or take the lead in planning other types of parties which your stepfather will approve?

Autumn is a good time for picnics and scavenger hunts. Write today for your free copies of Martha Carr's leaflets, telling how to plan these parties. Be sure to inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

At the Movies

By Edward Kosmal

FOR a girl who has come up with sparkling comedy in the past ("Doctor in the House"), Director Muriel Box loses some ground in "SIMON AND LAURA" at the SHADY OAK. Her latest light-hearted attempt at satire, this time it's the television industry a la BBC, cools in the transmission to no more than tepid entertainment.

Hunting for a show that will keep the home screens aglow, BBC decides on a five-day-a-week night-time program starring an "ideal" real-life married couple. The two—selected (Kay Kendall and Peter Finch) have already split up for the nth time; however, they're hastily reconciled on a business basis for the sound reason that they need the money. And by mutual consent the new roles aren't permitted to dampen their former style. So off screen they spat and fume, then on camera it's kiss and make up. The TV show captivates all of England and, as only soap operas can, it rolls on for years from one blissful crisis to another. Finally a drunken brawl breaks up a program, and to the cast's astonishment, the impromptu performance rocks the island. This was, it seems, exactly what the country was waiting for. Likewise the lovers, for they find themselves in each other's arms again.

Brightest spot in the J. Arthur Rank Technicolor production is the effulgent Kay Kendall, who has displayed her charm before in "Genevieve" and "Doctor in the House."

Social Problems

By Emily Post

"THE other evening my husband and I and another couple went to the movies. During the picture, the wife of this other couple felt ill and had to leave. I have heard indirectly that she was quite put out about our not leaving with them, and thinks we showed very little concern for her health. Will you please tell me if we should have left too?"

Since her husband was with her and went home with her, I can't see what use there would have been in your also leaving the movie. Had you let her go out into the night alone, then I agree that you would have shown very little concern.

DEAR MRS. POST: I am about to have my linens monogrammed and would like to have them marked with both my fiancé's and my initials instead of my initials alone. For example, the initial of my future name in the center (this is to be larger than the other two) and the initial of our first names on either side of it. I have been told that this marking is incorrect and that the man's initial does not belong on linen. I don't see why not as it is to be used by us both. I would very much like to know what you think of this type of marking.

ANSWER: The linen which is to be used in your and his house usually is marked with your future initials alone. But you may use both names as you have suggested.

DEAR MRS. POST: How wrong would it be for my mother to go back to her first marriage name. She was married many years to my father and several years after he died she married again, but this marriage lasted only a year.

ANSWER: It is not unusual for a mother to take back the name of her children's father under the circumstances you describe.

DEAR MRS. POST: Will you please tell me whether it is considered good table manners to eat all of one food at a time before starting on another. For example, all the potatoes; then the vegetables and finally the meat? There is no rule—eat what you like, in the order you like.

Weekly Report

On Public Health

By J. Earl Smith, M.D.

St. Louis Health Commissioner

THE back-to-school trek has begun and the carefree, summer vacation pattern of family life shifts back to the school-year routine. Naturally parents are eager for their children to get back to school but too often they fail to realize that good or bad marks may depend on whether a child leaves home well-fed and well-rested, or hungry and tired. A tired, hungry child finds it difficult to concentrate, is likely to be cross and irritable, and his school work will surely suffer.

Good breakfast habits are an important beginning to each day's activities. By breakfast time at least 10 to 12 hours have passed since the last meal. Even when sleeping the body still must keep operating. A well-chosen breakfast helps repair body losses that occur at night and furnishes food energy needed for the morning work. Breakfast should be planned ahead of time and as a part of the whole day's meals. It should supply one-fourth to one-third of the daily food needs, which is certainly logical since we do that much or more of our day's work in the morning. Allow plenty of time so that the youngsters—and adults too—won't have to bolt their food and run.

A proper breakfast plan includes the following five foods: (1) fruit or fruit juice, preferably orange, grapefruit or tomato juice, (2) a protein food—egg, meat or whole-grain cereal, (3) bread or toast, muffin rolls, (4) butter or margarine, and (5) at least one eight-ounce glass of milk. Remember that variety in the breakfast menu is as important as it is in the lunch or dinner menu, and that variety will frequently stimulate a slumping appetite.

School routine takes energy and effort on the part of the participants so that adequate sleep every night is as important for a child as adequate food. The kindergarten pupil should be in bed by 8 p.m. to make up for the daily nap he has been accustomed to. Grade-school children require nine to 11 hours of sleep a night and teenagers at least eight to nine hours, depending on age. General health and physical make-up. Parents must be firm about bed time, particularly on school nights. They have learned by experience whether "just one more" TV or radio program will mean a struggle to wake up in the morning. The wise parent also will screen out those programs that may over-stimulate

My Day

Busy Meeting at Geneva

By Eleanor Roosevelt

GENEVA.

THIS is quite the busiest meeting that I have ever attended. In fact, I begin to feel that government meetings are in some ways easier than these unofficial World Federation of United Nations Associations meetings.

We began the day at 9 o'clock with delegation meetings, but it was really 9:20 before everyone assembled and business began. As a result, we were late in getting up to the Palais de Nations where we are still holding our meetings because there are plenary sessions and invited speakers.

During the morning the subject was economic and social co-operation in the United Nations. A representative of technical assistance, James Keen, gave a good account of the work going on all over the world in that field. The representative from Sierra Leone in Africa read a most interesting message on the need for economic aid from a representative in his country who could not attend.

DR. LANGE of Poland made a very fine and objective speech on the co-operation we should try to achieve between countries of different economic and political systems.

In the discussion period, a delegate from the United Kingdom, while praising Dr. Lange's speech, said he must make one slight correction, namely, that you could not divide the countries as Dr. Lange had done. He explained that there are many a child and keep him awake long after he has gone to bed.

Contract Bridge

By Easley Blackwood

DON'T think the rule of 11 will solve all of your problems on defense. As useful as it is to defender, it sometimes works to the advantage of declarer.

In the bidding of today's hand it appears that Miss Brash should have raised hearts somewhere along the line. But of course she likes to play the hand as it happened, it was fortunate that she decided to try for game at no trump because she got a fortunate opening lead at that contract and the extremely bad break in the heart suit probably would have resulted in defeat at four hearts.

Mr. Muzzy carefully selected his fourth highest club, the seven spot, for his opening lead. Looking the hand over, Miss Brash optimistically counted five heart winners, the ace of clubs, the ace of diamonds. It appeared that she would have to knock out the ace of spades to set up enough tricks in that suit to make her game.

Without the rule of 11 she might have gone up with dummy's ace of clubs at trick one, she could knock out the ace of spades at once, before the defenders attacked her vulnerable holding in diamonds. With dummy's good club holding and the 10 in her hand, there was danger that the defenders could run away with that suit.

However, using the rule of 11, she decided on another line of play. It appeared almost certain that the seven of clubs was an honest fourth best lead. She deduced from the 11 and determined that there were four clubs higher than the seven spot outside of Mr. Muzzy's hand.

She could see all four of these higher clubs in her own hand and the dummy. So she let the opening lead ride to her hand in the firm belief that Mr. Champion had no club higher than the seven.

Her ten spot won and she promptly drove out the ace of spades. Mr. Champion switched to diamonds, but it was too late. Miss Brash won with the ace, thus won three clubs, three spades, three hearts and a diamond for four-odd.

Fix It Yourself

Painting Green New Wood.

SOMETIMES this whole business of doing it yourself becomes a little confusing. Take for example the case of a homeowner who had a porch added to his home. He figured he'd save a little money by painting the porch himself.

First bit of advice he got was to paint the new wood just as soon as he could get at it so he bought the paint and was all set to begin painting when along came someone who told him the wood was green and that he shouldn't paint green wood. Now he doesn't know what to do.

The usual rule for new wood that is exposed to the weather is to paint it right away. If the wood is green, however, give it about one week of sunshine and it will be dry enough to take paint.

One good thing about the whole paint—the prime coat—is the most important. Get this on as fast as you can and the wood will be OK for several weeks. But don't let it go too long before you apply the second and third coats.

A prime coat won't stand up to long when exposed to the sun and rain and if you allow it to wear thin, the wood will become rough and discolored. You can, however, give the prime coat a little more resistance to the weather so that it will last a month or so before the finish coats are applied. To do this you simply add a little linseed oil and then a small amount of turpentine to give it good brushing consistency.

A good trick for exterior woodwork is to allow it to dry out and give it a prime coat before it's cut and fastened into place. This is especially useful in wet weather when the wood can be dried out and primed indoors so that when it's finally put in place it needs only a few days of dry weather for the finish coats to be applied.

Let's Explore Your Mind

By Dr. Albert E. Wiggam

1. DO MEN PREFER INTELLECTUAL WOMEN? YOUR OPINION

PSYCHOLOGIST Wendell White says in "Psychology in Living": "When a man is in the mood for love, he doesn't want a college course. When in the mood for work, he doesn't care to find the one he loves seductive. The man or woman who can be intellectually as well as emotionally satisfying is enjoyed and respected. When love is dominant, traces of intellect should still be apparent but recessive; when intellectual factors are dominant, the love factor should be visible in the background."

Answer to Question 2.

Yes. Many persons score low or flunk job tests not because they are ignorant but because they are in a state of anxiety. Dorothy W. Otten, personnel expert, advises: "Get complete information about what is required, where the exam is to be held, how to get there. Study in advance so there will be no need for frantic cramming. Relax the night before with pleasant recreation, don't stay up late, get up early enough to make a leisurely trip. Dress comfortably, take along what was specified, and something to read while waiting."

Answer to Question 3.

No, there are three—your side, the other fellow's and the most nearly right side. If it is a question that can be solved by a foot-rule or a pair of scales, there are only two sides: the right and the wrong. But in problems of life, such as marriage, money, politics, etc., neither side is entirely right or wrong. Such problems involve human beings with all their emotions, beliefs and attitudes. Therefore, human questions have to be solved by compromise; and you don't say one way is right or wrong, but only that one way is better than another.

Tasty Tricks

Time is of the essence when broiling steaks on the outdoor grill. For a rare two-inch steak, allow 10 to 12 minutes. For very rare, eight to 10 minutes; time is allotted the same thickness.

Frozen Goodness

Freeze fresh herbs now and enjoy fresh-from-the-garden seasonings the year 'round. Wrap sprigs of mint, chervil, marjoram, thyme and other herbs in freezer foil or paper. Combine all of the papers in a freezer bag or carton to store in your home freezer.

Uncle Ray's Column

By Ramon Coffman

PERHAPS it seemed to some readers that my letters from Europe came to an end too suddenly. In a general way, I agree with that, but I wish to say that more of the material which I gathered in Europe will find its way into this column in months to come.

Today I shall take up a few questions about my travels.

Q. On your recent trip to Europe, did you visit any countries besides England, Holland, Italy, Monaco and France?

A. I also made quick trips into Austria and Switzerland. One day I asked my brother, Paul, who is in the consular service:

Q. Which country in Europe, if any, would you call the "Happy Land"?

"Austria!" he replied. "The Austrians enjoy simple things. They have little money, but they go on hikes into the mountains and have a great time."

Q. Which other countries in Europe have you visited in the past?

A. In addition to the nations mentioned, I have visited Germany, Norway, Sweden, Russia, Poland, Finland, Ireland, Wales, Belgium and Czechoslovakia. In a general way, I agree with that, but I wish to say that more of the material which I gathered in Europe will find its way into this column in months to come.

Aside from my personal interest in travel, I go abroad to obtain facts for our column. Hundreds of my articles have been based on what I have learned in this manner. I have visited some countries (including England, France and Switzerland) as many as six times.

Q. When did you visit Russia?

A. Between the first and second world wars. I spent only short time there, but kept my eyes wide open.

Q. Which sights in Europe have you found most interesting?

A. Pompeii, the Fjords of Norway, the Swiss Alps, the Coliseum, the British Museum, the Tower of London, Venice, Amsterdam, the Louvre, Stratford-on-Avon, Blarney Castle.

That is only a partial list of places I have found interesting and enjoyable in Europe.
